TO THE CLASS OF 1962

As I extend to you a warm welcome to Williams, there is a recent song running through my head: "We belong to a Mutual Admiration Society." You have shown rare discrimination in deciding that you want to join our company, and we have obviously been unusually discerning in selecting you.

Williams College is a community to which those who belong count a rare privilege. Its long and distinguished tradition, its high scholastic standing, the beauty of its natural setting, the intimacy of the relationship between students and faculty, its large company of outstanding alumni—all of these have, I am sure, contributed to your desire to come here. You will not be disappointed. There is an alchemy about this place which will have its way with you as it has had with so many before you; and you will soon find yourself caught in its spell.

You are an uniquely qualified group of students who have demonstrated your ability to do a high level of academic work. Most of you could have been accepted at any college you chose. Your records of scholastic achievement, extracurricular activities and general character are impressive.

You are entering college at a time when education is more important than it has ever been. The stakes for which we play are dangerously high. I am sure that you will want to take full advantage of this opportunity and the privilege that is yours. We look forward with pleasure and pride to working with you in our common tasks.

DEDICATION

This year's Eph Williams Handbook is dedicated to the incoming class of 1962, with the wish that you, the members of that class, will use it to acquaint yourselves with your new surroundings during the first hectic days of orientation. Although orientation is the primary purpose of this publication, you will find that this book will be of great service throughout your years at Williams. With this reminder, we, the Editors of the Handbook, along with students of Williams College, bid you welcome and wish you the best of luck in the four years of your college career.

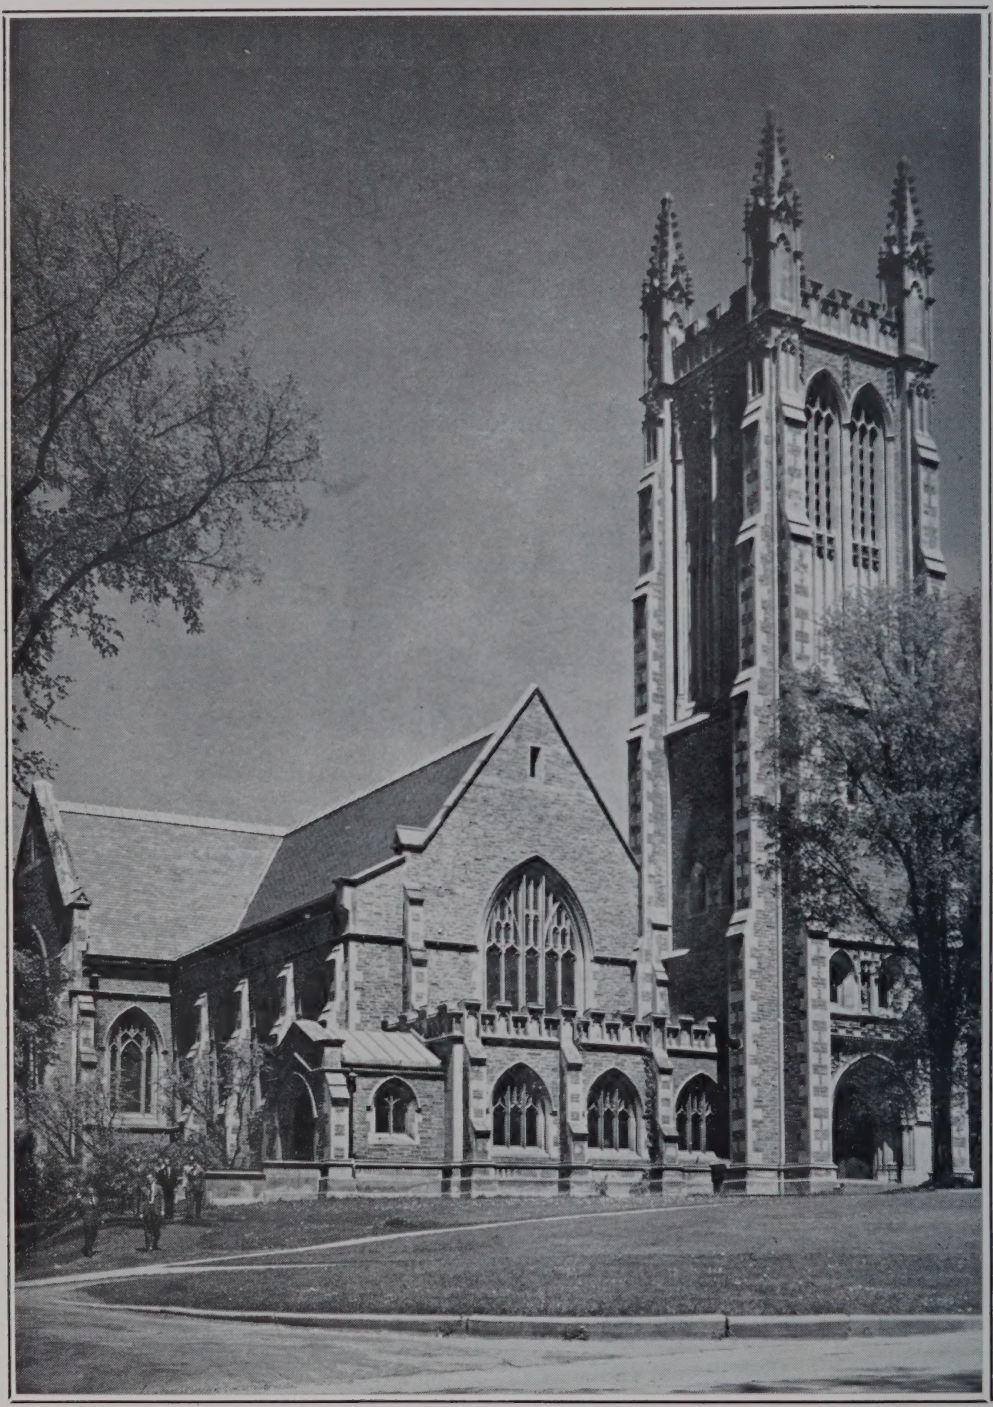
What's What in the Class of 1962 109



Thompson Memorial Chapel

President Baxter

To the members of the Class of 1962:

No class admitted to Williams in my time has presented so fine a set of records for entrance to the college, both in scholarship and all round ability. As the competition for places in the Class has been even keener than in earlier years I congratulate each one of you on your success. You will find this a delightful community, and the opportunities for self-development here a real challenge.

Williams has been host this summer to two hundred investment bankers who came here for a short refresher course, to 33 executives of the Bell System, who are now in the middle of an eight weeks' program, and a group of college and university teachers of Biology attending a six weeks' course in recent developments in that field. Soon we shall be welcoming a group of Business School professors. These programs are evidence of the growing consciousness that life in America is growing more complicated and demanding.

Our fine Faculty will be ready to welcome you seven weeks hence and to help you fit yourself for life in the more difficult America of the post-Sputnik period. A warm welcome awaits you.

Freshman Picnic

TO THE FRESHMEN

Freshman year is never a period of triumph or reward, but rather a time of preparation and first associations. Your first year is the most important of the four as it provides a foundation for your remaining years.

Try to make yourself as well-rounded as possible. Do not become a one-sided "grind". Get to know your classmates, for each one of them has something to offer. Finally, adopt a serious attitude toward your studies as studies should be your main purpose.

The Dean's office will inform you of the date when your rooms will be ready for occupancy. Room keys may be secured at the Treasurer's office, 10 Hopkins Hall. Immediately upon arrival in Williamstown, you should check with the Junior Adviser assigned to your entry.

The studies in the dormitories are furnished with desks, easy chairs, day beds, and the bedrooms with bureaus, single beds and chairs. Rugs, divan covers, lamps, bookcases and other furniture are not supplied, but such things may be purchased from the merchants in Williamstown.

Furniture, marked with the sender's name and room number may be shipped to Williamstown in care of the Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, Williams College. Such articles will be placed in the rooms prior to the opening of college.

College offices are located in Hopkins Hall. Administration, faculty and undergraduate notices are posted on the bulletin boards on the first floor and published daily in the Adviser which is posted on the bulletin boards about the campus at noon.

ORIENTATION

Freshman Orientation will begin this year on Wednesday, the seventeenth of September. You are expected to attend all the scheduled events and the penalty for not doing so will be two weeks of no-cuts, when all classes must be attended.

Other meetings of the Freshman Class will take place throughout the year. Attendance at these meetings is also required. At these meetings the class will be addressed by the members of the faculty and administration. The meetings will be used to familiarize the class with the aims of the college and to discuss any current problems concerning the class.

FACULTY ADVISERS

Each entry in the freshman dormitories has a member of the faculty assigned to it. These men are chosen for their ability to get along with students. They are always ready and able to offer advice on any subject concerning your life at Williams. If any trouble should arise, especially in regard to your scholastic life, you should not hesitate to call on these men.

JUNIOR ADVISERS

Williams College has a program whereby two, and sometimes three, juniors live in each entry in the Freshman Quad. These men, selected by a special committee, have been chosen for their ability to aid freshmen in adapting to college life. They will aid the new students in becoming adjusted, give them academic assistance, and throughout the year will be of every possible service. The advisers are responsible for the maintenance of gentlemanly conduct in the freshman dormitories. Freshmen should feel free to consult their junior advisers, in addition to faculty advisers, concerning any problems that may occur.

CAMPUS OPPORTUNITIES

Extracurricular

Williams College, in keeping with the tradition of the Liberal Arts college, has a wide variety of activities in the extracurricular field. These activities range from WMS, the college radio station, to the recently formed Sky-Diving Club. The Flying Club offers students a chance to learn to fly, while the Outing Club sponsors skiing events, hiking and fishing trips and other outdoor pursuits. For those of a journalistic bent, the Gulielmensian, (the college yearbook), the Williams News Bureau, The Adviser, the Record and the Handbook all offer wonderful opportunities to freshmen. The Adelphic Union provides a field of endeavor for those interested in debating, with several dual meets and tournaments involving numerous teams. In addition, for those interested in acting or the theatre, the Adams Memorial Theatre and Cap and Bells offer a number of productions during the school year. In the field of music, there are numerous singing and performing opportunities. In the vocal field, octets from the various classes sing at colleges throughout the New England area. In addition, the Glee Club has concerts in conjunction with Smith, Wellesley and Mt. Holyoke. There are opportunities for instrumental participation in the Purple Knights dance band and the College Band. The Travel Bureau offers special rates on a trip to Bermuda each Spring Vacation and will make reservations for you whenever you wish to leave Williamstown. Finally, there is the Yacht Club, the Sports Car Club and various foreign language organizations.

Each of these extra-curricular activities has a system of "competes" (students who wish to join and work for the organization) who must work for the organization before they are accepted. It is hoped that every freshman will support these organizations, not only by participating in their activities but by supporting the various functions which they stage.

You should not participate in so many extra-curricular affairs that your scholastic position is threatened. Instead, you should pick out the organizations which interest you most, and if you work hard as a "compet" and plan your time well, you should have no trouble balancing membership in extra-curricular functions with success in your work.

Athletic And Social

Athletics play a large part in the life of the college. Over the years Williams has compiled an enviable sports record, and has managed to defeat Amherst many more times, in all sports, than they have beaten us.

If a freshman does not go out for an organized sport, he must take P. T. (physical training) for three hours a week under the direction of one of the coaches. Freshmen are allowed three absences per semester in P. T.

During the fall, four sports are offered to all freshmen: football, soccer, cross country and tennis. In the winter season the organized sports include basketball, hockey, swimming, wrestling, squash, skiing and winter track. In the spring there are baseball, lacrosse, tennis, track and golf.

The freshman's social life is anything but limited. In the first few weeks of college there are mixers with Skidmore, Smith, Mt. Holyoke and Vassar. After that, if the freshman wishes to go to a girls' college he need only consult the ride lists which are posted by the stairs to the dining hall in the Student Union. Freshmen should take advantage of the rides offered as it is the best way to meet and get to know upperclassmen.

WORK

Employment on campus and outside is controlled by the Office of Student Aid, on the first floor of Hopkins Hall, which is run by Henry N. Flynt, Jr. The Office has, in past years, succeeded in getting more than 500 jobs a year for Williams students.

Students are hired in all the departments of the college, especially in the Chemistry Laboratory and the Library. There are job opportunities to be found ranging from taking attendance in large lecture classes to showing visitors around the campus.

Student-operated concessions are vastly diversified and highly lucrative. Examples of these concessions are selling refreshments in the dormitories and at athletic contests, soliciting magazine and newspaper subscriptions, selling Williams banners and beer mugs, running laundry agencies and marketing everything else from jewelry to used furniture.

Opportunities for work in and around Williamstown are severely limited by the size of the community; however, jobs such as lawn-mowing and baby sitting are fairly easily found.

For freshmen, job opportunities are limited. It has been shown that, due to their lack of experience and the strangeness of a new environment, freshmen should not depend upon this type of employment for the major part of their expenses. Moreover, it is difficult enough to get good grades during freshman year without the added strain and loss of time which such jobs entail. The most satisfactory employment for freshmen is to be found in the Freshman Dining Hall. These jobs are assigned by the Committee on Student Aid and most of them go to students on scholarship.

RELIGIOUS LIFE

The religious life of Williams College is centered around the Williams College Chapel. This is an organization which is open to all students in the college, no matter what denomination. Membership in the Chapel does not constitute membership in a church. The main purpose of the Chapel group is "through worship, study and action to deepen the religious life of the students of Williams College."

Services are held every Sunday at 7:30 except during big weekends when they are at 11 o'clock. The services are held in the Thompson Memorial Chapel. Outstanding ministers from all denominations and from all parts of the country, as well as members of our own faculty and student body, speak on topics of concern to the College community. Students must attend Sunday Chapel or one of the Williamstown churches at least half the Sundays of the school year. In addition to the Sunday services, there is also a daily chapel service conducted by the student members of the College Chapel and faculty from 12:00 noon to 12:10.

There are many other activities conducted by the College Chapel. The Chapel Board, consisting of five seniors, five juniors and two sophomores, conducts study groups and open meetings throughout the year. In addition, a Religious Forum visits the campus each February, bringing speakers from the three great religious traditions of Western Civilization: Judaism, Roman Catholicism and Protestantism.

Congregational Church

Opportunities are plentiful for service to the community through the Williamstown Boys' Club, the local churches and other welfare groups. Work camps and conferences with other colleges are included in the organization's activities. The Chapel also sponsors the annual Campus Chest Fund Drive.

There are four other religious organizations on campus. The first is the Washington Gladden Society, named for the prominent New England clergyman. The Society exists for the benefit of those students who are considering the ministry or some other religious vocation. Another group is the Williams College Newman Club, a student organization affiliated with the National Newman Federation. The club presents lectures, discussions and other activities designed for the development of the Catholic student's understanding of religious problems. The Williams College Jewish Association and the Episcopal Student Vestry perform the same function for the students of those faiths.

The Assistant Professor of Religion and Chaplain of the College is the Rev. Lawrence DeBoer. He is always available to students to help or counsel in any way. His office is on the first floor of Baxter Hall.

The following churches hold regular services in the area.

Baptist - Main Street, Williamstown; Rev. Samuel G. Graham. Service—11:00 a.m.

Christian Science - Chestnut Street, North Adams.

First Congregational - Main Street; Rev. Robert Foster. Service—11:00 a.m.

Second Congregational - Hancock Road, South Williamstown. Service—11:00 a.m.

Methodist - Main Street, Williamstown; Rev. Newell Davis. Service—11:00 a.m.

St. John's Episcopal - Park Street; Rev. Grant Noble. Services—8:00, 9:15 and 11:00 a.m.

St. Patrick's Roman Catholic - Southworth Street; Rev. Herbert Carroll. Masses—6:30, 8:30, 10:30 a.m.

St. Raphael's Roman Catholic - Cole Avenue; Rev. George Brunelle. Masses—7:30, 9:30 a.m.

Universalist - Summer Street, North Adams.

All the above services are on Sunday.

PRIZES

The Trustees of the College offer prizes to the members of the Freshman Class who show excellence in intercollegiate debating. A debating contest is held each year to determine the winners. A memorial prize is also offered to the winner of the freshman English contest.

STUDENT BOOK EXCHANGE

The Student Book Exchange, located in the basement of Baxter Hall, was founded five years ago by Hal Pratt '54 and Henry N. Flynt, Jr., Director of Student Aid, to provide a central and convenient arrangement for book sales between students. The Exchange is open at the beginning and the end of semesters for deposit and sale of books. It affords good prices for both buyer and seller. The Exchange charges a fee of ten per cent of the sale price for its services.

RUSHING AGREEMENT 1958-1959

In the course of Williams College life, it is certainly desirable that academic, extra-curricular and social contacts should exist between freshmen and fraternity members. Naturally, both parties to the rushing agreement will form some new opinions and make some judgments on each other.

The intention of this rushing agreement is to provide opportunity for such normal association as is feasible within the limitations of the fraternity system. The College Council and the Social Council, acting jointly, prescribe the regulations listed below in order to prevent illegal rushing which shall be defined as follows:

Talk or communication relating to any freshman's standing as a prospective pledge as concerns (a) any house to any freshman, or (b) any freshman to any house. A fraternity member may divulge information about his own house except as stated in (a) or (b) above. A fraternity member may not make statements discrediting another house.

REGULATIONS

Each man signing this rushing agreement shall be bound by the following regulations from September 11, 1958 to the beginning of the formal rushing period for the class of 1962.

1. No freshman shall be allowed in any fraternity house or on any fraternity property except on official business—permission to be given only by the rushing arbiter, or persons designated by him. There shall be unrestricted communication between freshman and upper-class dormitories.

2. At no time shall there be illegal rushing (see definition above) on or off fraternity property.

3. All the freshmen and fraternity members shall sign a pledge stating that they will abide by the letter and the spirit of the above regulations.

PENALTIES

All cases of violation of this agreement must be reported to the Joint Rushing Committee of the College Council and the Social Council. The College Council and the Social Council shall have the right to convict for such violations, and shall be guided by the recommendations of the Joint Rushing Committee.

A. A freshman violating this agreement may be deprived of joining a fraternity until junior year.

B. A house convicted of violating this agreement shall be subject to any or all of the following penalties.

1. Emphasis in the Record of that house's conviction.
2. A $300 fine.
3. Up to two academic months of social probation.

Note: Social Probation shall include the following:

1. The exclusion of all women from the fraternity house.
2. The prohibition of house-taxable and open-subscription parties.

STUDENT UNION

Baxter Hall, the student center next to Sage Hall, is the key to successful integration of the freshman class, which is the primary objective of the deferred rushing system. The modern brick building functions as a substitute for the fraternities and here freshmen will find a place to eat, relax, entertain dates and, above all, to meet each other and create a unified class.

An important function of the new building is to feed the entire freshman class plus the upperclassmen who are independent. The building contains a dining room for each group and almost unlimited kitchen facilities, including baking and butcher shops. The entire dining set-up is under Mr. Sydney M. Chisholm, the Director of Dining Halls. All fifteen fraternities also purchase food through the central operations of the Fraternity Dining Service.

Freshman social activities center around the Union with a series of dances, movies, smokers and other social functions planned by the Student Union Committee, an undergraduate organization, and Senor Antonio de Lahiguera, Director of Student Union Activities.

For in-between-meal snacks, refreshments after the "flicks", or a hamburger to break up a long evening of studying, the Union contains a snack bar. Located in the basement is the "Rathskeller", site of weekend Dixieland and social activities. Adjoining recreation rooms contain numerous pool, ping-pong and billiard tables where the college tournaments are held.

The dining halls easily accommodate dances for all classes, and freshman and upperclass lounges along with post office facilities for the freshmen complete the accommodations.

The Student Union is also the center for extra-curricular activities. An expandable meeting room doubles as an art gallery and a meeting place for the College Council, Social Council and other organizations as well as providing a site for seminars and student-faculty discussions. Three rooms hold the Williams Record and News Bureau offices with a teletype and mimeographing room downstairs. A darkroom, the modern radio studios of WMS and the Student Book Exchange fill the rest of the basement.

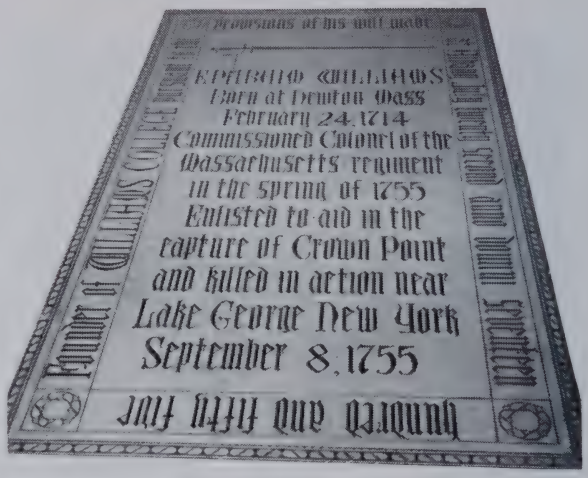
WILLIAMS COLLEGE

ITS HISTORY AND INSTITUTIONS

Legend Of The Founder Who Fell In Battle



In the first volley of a reconnoitering engagement known as the "Bloody Morning Scout" in September, 1755, Ephraim Williams fell. In the course of this skirmish, a preliminary to the Battle of Lake George, there were bullets fired from guns, unimportant shots which may or may not have hit their marks, but which changed to no extent the course of history. But one bullet, which lodged in the head of the Colonel of the English forces was perhaps the most important bullet in the history of education. This Colonel, Ephraim Williams, Jr. and the unknown French marksman who fired that shot are the co-founders of Williams College.

Some two months previously in Albany the Colonel had made his will, leaving most of his estate to establish a free school in West Hoosac, provided its name should be changed to Williamstown. This was the contribution of Ephraim Williams to the cause of education. It was the contribution of the French marksman to make sure the will was not changed. Had it not been for that shot, there would probably have been no Williams College today.

Colonel Williams was a man with a long span of life before him, with great talents at his disposal, with important family connections. Had he lived through the French and Indian War he would probably have come out a famous man, have risen to an even greater eminence in public counsels than he had held before, have gone on to greater triumphs. He might have been one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and of the Constitution; he might have been married and founded his own family, perpetuating his name in flesh and blood rather than in a town. And in the course of this longer and more illustrative career for which he was meant, he would, as is the custom of men, frequently have changed his will. With the acquisition of new friends and new interests—perhaps even a family—the Colonel would have forgotten the free school in favor of more immediate legatees.

However, the shot was fired.

It is significant that the unimportant little school in the unimportant backwoods township was founded by no unimportant soldier, but rather by one who stood upon the threshold of fame. It is almost as if the Colonel, dying, had left to the school not only his money but also the brilliant career which should have been his, as though the greatness of Williams the college rose, phoenix-like, from the fallen greatness of Williams the man.

The story of Ephraim Williams is a brief footnote to the account of how France and England played with the dice of war—the game itself part of a greater struggle fought in Europe, India, and America—with the mastery of a continent at stake. The story of Ephraim Williams, gallant gentleman, is the tale of a man cast in heroic mold and destined for a brilliant career which was snuffed out, candlewise, with fatal irony.

Both are tales which must be told against the background of the Western Massachusetts of that day.

Hampshire, as it was then called, was a simple agricultural society, centered about the towns of Stockbridge, Hatfield, and Deerfield, ringed round with a cordon of border forts for protection against Indian raids and French military pressure alike, and dominated by a few great Tory families, aristocratic descendants of early Puritans who had pushed westward into the interior, leaving Boston behind them.

The greatest family in Hampshire was Williams, and the greatest figure in this family was Colonel Israel Williams—so-called "Monarch of Hampshire"; his royal seat at Hatfield was the nerve center of the whole region.

Into this frontier community, following his father, who settled in Stockbridge about 1740, came in his thirtieth year Ephraim Williams, Jr., nephew of the "Monarch of Hampshire." Little of his life is known before this. When he was three years old his mother died in giving birth to a second son. The boys were sent to live with their grandfather, Abraham Jackson, as substantial a citizen as then walked the streets of Newton.

At the proper age his brother Thomas went to Princeton, but the college-founding Ephraim never advanced far in education; it seems that his youth was spent in adventure—Ebenezer Fitch says: "For several years in the early life Colonel Williams followed the sea; but by persuasion of his father relinquished that business." Apparently Grandfather Jackson also disapproved, for in his will he remembered Thomas far more favorably than the elder Ephraim.

From his Welsh ancestors the Founder inherited a strong physique which his early years at sea only served to strengthen. From his well-to-do background he acquired a love of fine things, as well as an ease of address and a polish of manner which were accentuated by the broadening and cosmopolitan influence of his travels. From a sound and eager mind he acquired a longing for learning and a profound belief in education as the touchstone to turn the animal, man, into a rational creature capable of governing. Within his soul, fed by the fuel of all these other influences, there burned that bright flame of genius which enabled him to lead men, to persuade them to his will, and to inspire them with a devotion to himself.

This was the young man who, in the middle of the Eighteenth Century, came to Hampshire. There, thanks to his own abilities and the influence of his family, he early rose to prominence. Appearing first in Stockbridge records in 1742, as "Ephm Williams, Jr., the Surveyor," he was two years later representing Stockbridge in the General Court. There "his politeness and address procured him a greater influence . . . than any other person at that date possessed."

The next year saw him back once more in Hampshire, to take command of the border Fort Shirley with a captain's commission, and also to throw his weight into the feud between his family and the supporters of Jonathan Edwards, leader of the tremendous emotional religious revival at that time sweeping Western Massachusetts and leaving the superstitious lower classes, in particular, in a ferment of fear of hell, fire and damnation. Driven from parish to parish by upper-class distrust, Edwards at last secured the post at Stockbridge, and apparently used his position as a sinecure to support his large family and himself while he engaged in religious writing.

Against Edwards and emotionalism the Williams family threw its entire weight and Ephraim—whose view of the Almighty was an orthodox but unemotional one of a Sovereign Power—joined with his family. Not only did the Williamses have the typical distrust of the well-to-do for lower-class emotional movements, not only did they feel that Edwards was unfit to preach the Gospel of Christ to the Indians, but also they opposed his interference with the political purpose of the Mission, the conversion of the savages not only to Christianity but also to Britishanity. The titanic struggle with France was plainly coming, and for reasons of patriotism and self-interest the Williamses opposed anything that tended to weaken British power in the approaching clash.

Just as the Edwards affair closed, the first indecisive skirmish of this struggle began. King George's War had repercussions of occasional Indian raids into the Hampshire region, and Ephraim Williams had his share of this wilderness fighting. Although entirely self-trained in the art of war, the young captain gave a good account of himself, not only winning victories but doing so with a minimum loss of life. An interim of peace came with the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle in 1748, and the reduced garrison of Fort Massachusetts returned to humdrum routine.

Most of this peaceful interlude Ephraim Williams spent in Hampshire, dividing his time between his fort and the more civilized towns of the interior. His life on the frontier was simple in the extreme, and scholarly as well as military, for he was never without the books he loved. There are still records of shipments of them being made to Fort Massachusetts. He spent much time in looking out for and training his men, who were all devoted to him. He also entered into their rough and tumble outdoor games, in which he could throw any of them. It was partly concern for his soldiers—many of whom settled in West Hoosac—which led him to provide for the free school in his will.

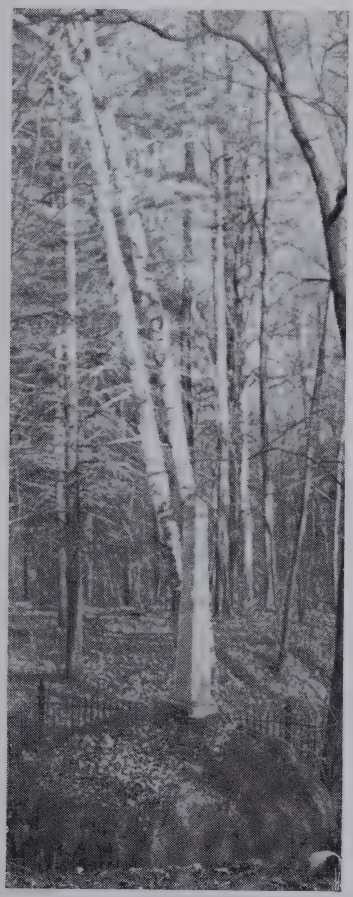
He also spent much of his peacetime in propagandist activities at Stockbridge, where he spent various sums in entertaining Indians for which he was afterwards reimbursed by the Colonial Legislature. Occasionally he went to Deerfield to visit his father who died only a year before he himself fell in battle.

According to tradition the bright eyes of his cousin Elizabeth, as well as conferences with his all-powerful uncle, called him to the "Monarch's" court at Hatfield, but nothing came of this love affair. Like George Washington, with whom he had much else in common, the young soldier was not yet ready for the influences of matrimony. There would have been time for that later on, but a French marksman intervened and Ephraim Williams fell.

The period of peace came to an end in 1754. The frontier captain received a commission as Colonel of Hampshire militia, and an assignment to march his men to Albany to take part in the attack on Crown Point.

At Albany all was in confusion. The frontier produced splendid fighters but poor commisaries, and supplies were short. Furthermore, there existed a military jealousy among Generals Shirley, Lyman, and Johnson, paralyzing the army and rendering effective action impossible. Colonel Williams brought to bear all the influence of his family and rank to get adequate supplies for the forces and played the peacemaker among the jealous generals, whose conferences he attended. He also found time to make his will, leaving his money to the cause of education and his name to immortality through a town and a school.

At length all was as much in order as it would ever be, and the army—a pall of gloom thrown over it by the news of Braddock's recent defeat—moved forward to Lake George and destiny. Down from Montreal was advancing a force of French and Indians under the leadership of the brilliant Dieskau, whose commander of the Indians, St. Pierre, had helped to rout Braddock. On the shore of Lake George the millwheels of the French and English ambition met, and between them were ground to pieces many of the pawns in this imperial game, including the brilliant young Colonel from Hampshire.



Eph Williams monument erected by alumni

On the fatal morning September 8, 1755 Colonel Ephraim Williams was killed while commanding a mixed force of boys and Indians who had never acted together as a unit, and were mostly untrained. Tradition has it that he walked into a trap, but detailed military analysis of the accounts of the battle seems to show that the self-trained Colonel was the strategic equal of the brilliant Dieskau, that he had full knowledge of the position of the enemy, that he was maneuvering his men into carefully planned positions. Had the French fire spared him to inspire his men to brave performance the outcome would have been different from the complete rout into which the untrained backwoodsmen were driven by the loss of the unifying force of their leader.

On the spot where he fell The Society of Alumni of Williams College has raised a monument to his memory, but through the last century and a half a far nobler monument has been erected by untiring work, in a place once called West Hoosac. There, in June of 1920, his remains were brought and with full military honors were deposited in a vault in Thompson Memorial Chapel.

The impression has been generally held that aside from leaving the money out of which grew Williams College, there was nothing distinctive about Ephraim Williams. No more unfair judgment could be made. He was one of the outstanding men the early colonies produced, and only the accident of French marksmanship prevented the flowering of a brilliant career.

Williams College is fortunate in having so great a man for its founder; the college could take to itself no worthier ideal than to turn out men in his mold. While the Colonel was acknowledged an aristocrat by society of his day, the essential point about him was that he belonged to the far nobler aristocracy of individual merit, in intellectual, as well as physical attributes. With a broadness of mind remarkable in that day, he saw the coming trend toward democracy without attempting to resist it, although he was naturally suspicious of an easily swayed ignorant lower class. His devotion was to society, not to a particular stratum of it, and when he saw that control must pass from the hands of those he considered capable of wielding it, into the hands of those he suspected, his remedy was not to prevent this inevitable shift of control, but to train the future wielders of power so that they would be able to fill the positions to which they would be called.

Self-educated, both in war and in the classics, Ephraim Williams had a love of learning, a longing for it which would put to shame most of the beneficiaries of his legacy. His love of vigorous outdoor life and exercise is something which has also been forgotten by many of those who come to study in the valley 'neath the mountain wall, but who will never think to climb the heights around the valley.

In dignity of manner and dress most of the present day sons of Ephraim are worthy descendants of the Founder who fell in battle. When these latter day sons begin to emulate him in the more heroic virtues which gave him position in an aristocracy of worth, then will Williams College fulfill a purpose worthy of the man who founded it. It was his aim to establish a school which would train the unlettered lower classes, but far more would he have approved one which turned out for the service of the world men both inwardly and outwardly worthy to be called Williams gentlemen.

The Growth Of A College

Ephraim Williams made his will and fell in battle in 1755. Obedient to his wishes, West Hoosac changed its name to Williamstown, but nothing further was done until 1784. Suddenly the advantages of education dawned on the village. The Trustees of the Free School—mostly Yale men—were incorporated and they pressed the executors of the Colonel's estate for a settlement. When finally paid, the legacy proved inadequate, and it was supplemented by various lotteries and donations, particularly those from one of the Trustees.

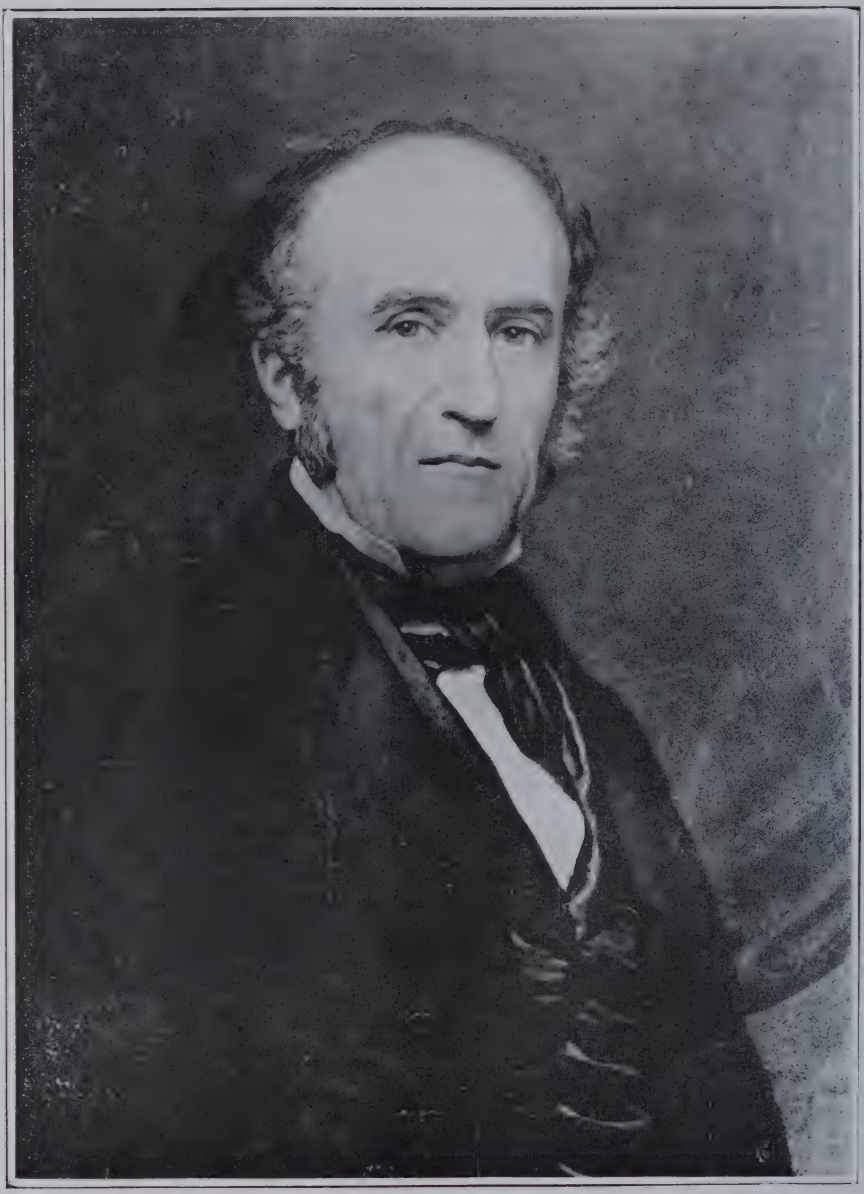
West College

A building—later to be called West College—was built. A preceptor—Ebenezer Fitch by name—was secured from Yale. On October 26, 1791, "The Academy and Free School in Williamstown" opened its doors.

Its career was brief, for greater things were in store. In 1793, the Legislature granted the Trustees a charter for a college, which took over the equipment and faculty of the Free School.

Life was a hard, serious thing in that out-of-the-way time and place. The students lived rough lives in humble quarters, drank, often to excess, danced and played cards. In spite of adversity and levity, however, these same students discussed serious problems in their two all-important debating societies—Philologian and Philotechnian.

As early as 1802 there was a serious undergraduate rebellion, but as usually happens the forces of established authority won out, and Dr. Fitch was able to write: "At last without the loss of a single member, we reduced all to due obedience and subordination".



Mark Hopkins
President of the College 1824-72

Such matters as rebellion required special measures—ordinary discipline was handled through a scale of fines for carefully graded offenses, of which "tardiness at prayers" was the least, and "cursing, fornication, or singing obscene songs" the worst.

In the year 1806 one of the most famous incidents in Williams' history occurred—the Haystack Prayer Meeting. An outdoor worship service held by five students was interrupted by rain. The five took refuge from the weather under a haystack and in the conversation beneath its shelter was born the idea of American foreign missions.

In 1815 President Fitch signified his intention to resign. From this point the fortunes of the institution began to decline, and agitation arose to have it removed to a more central part of the state, such as Amherst. The election of a new President—Zephaniah Swift Moore—for a while stemmed the tide, but Dr. Moore was of the Amherst persuasion. A temporary truce ended in 1821 when Moore—having failed to convert the Trustees to his point of view—left Williamstown to accept the presidency of what was to become Amherst College.

Finding a successor to President Moore proved a difficult problem. The Trustees twice elected men in a cavalier fashion without consulting them, and twice had the proferred presidency refused. Finally they consulted, and then elected Dr. Edward Dorr Griffin, a distinguished New Jersey clergyman.

Dr. Griffin's election, however, did not put a stop to Williams' troubles. The newly founded Amherst institution applied for and was granted a college charter. It was the consensus of opinion that Western Massachusetts could not support two colleges. Williams' enrollment began to fall off, and students asked for "dismissions" to Amherst. In the crisis faith and hope—ably assisted by charity—stepped into the breach. A religious revival gave new courage to the students, and also to the President who secured sufficient donations to build a new chapel—now Griffin Hall—and establish a new professorship. Observers accepted this activity as proof the fortunes of the college were not waning and the Berkshire institution continued to thrive, its enrollment to grow, its faculty to include more outstanding men, under the inspiring leadership of Dr. Griffin.

This leadership came to an end in 1836 when ill health forced him to resign. The Trustees—after considerable hesitation—followed the petition of the seniors of 1836, and elected to the Presidency Professor Mark Hopkins, 1824. With no fanfare, Williams quietly entered upon a period of great distinction. The endowment was increased, new buildings were put up—including the observatory built by Albert Hopkins and enthusiastic students—and new and better professors were added to the faculty. But the greatness of the college came not from these factors: it stemmed rather from the character of the man in the President's house, from the inspired teacher and leader of men who was Mark Hopkins.

Crises for the college were not all past, however. A concerted effort was made by Williamstown to tax the college property, and this devil was no sooner exorcised than East College burned, and Williams was faced with a serious financial emergency. This was met, after the Legislature refused to give aid, by private contributions.

Another crisis of a different sort was the student rebellion against an unpopular faculty ruling in 1868. Dr. Hopkins dealt with, rather than quelled, this protest, understanding that there was justification behind the undergraduate sentiment.

These years in the history of "old Williams" came to end in 1872, when the Trustees—following the suggestion of Dr. Mark himself—elected Paul A. Chadbourne '48 to be the new President. Although he had the misfortune to follow a very remarkable man in office, President Chadbourne's administration was highly successful, particularly in the strengthening of the faculty.

Nevertheless, the new regime was not without its troubles. The old agitation for removal of the college to a more central location was revived, and was followed by a serious effort to transform Williams into a co-educational institution. These difficulties were overcome, however, and for nine years President Chadbourne guided the destinies of the college, his administration forming an easy transition between the Williams that had been and the Williams that was to be.

In 1881, prompted by business difficulties and an inherent restlessness, the President proffered his resignation. In his stead the Trustees elected from the faculty Dr. Franklin Carter '62.

Carter, a fine scholar with a good eye for teachers, did much to improve the faculty and the finances of the College. The extensive building program which marked his administration included Morgan Hall, Lasell Gymnasium, Hopkins Hall, the Thompson Laboratories and Jesup Hall.

These were the days of the robber barons in American economic history, and the political corruption and moral indifference which made it possible for the plunderers to pile up colossal fortunes were reflected in the life of the undergraduate. Political machines ran the campus, offices were disposed of according to whims of powerful, interfraternity deals, and boot-licking of the neutral vote was the order of the day. In an effort to remedy these conditions, a group of outstanding men of the outgoing Class of 1895 organized the senior honorary society of Gargoyle, taking the name from a gargoyle over one of the Morgan Hall entrances. In various ways such as securing the adoption of the "No Deal Agreement," Gargoyle did much to improve the conditions which had led to its founding and through the years the Society has sought to live up to its founders' aim of service to Williams. One of its greatest contributions to the college was its work in 1896 in securing the adoption of the Honor System for written tests.

The later years of Dr. Carter's administration were beset by recurring attempts to tax the college property. The question was finally settled in favor of the college, but long before this, in 1901, ill health had forced the President to resign.

For a short interregnum of two years Professor John Haskell Hewitt capably served as Acting President, while the Trustees were undecided in their choice of Dr. Carter's successor. The period of indecision ended in 1902, when they elected to the Presidency of the College the Reverend Henry Hopkins, son of Dr. Mark.

In an administration of seven years Dr. Hopkins brought many improvements to the college. Although the size of the student body increased about one-fifth during this period the size of the faculty almost doubled, with the result that much smaller classroom divisions were achieved.

Dr. Hopkins had specified at his acceptance of the presidency that he would remain in office only seven years, and at the end of that time he resigned. For his successor the Trustees chose Harry Augustus Garfield '85, eldest son of the martyred United States President, Garfield, also a graduate of Williams.

Dr. Garfield's long administration witnessed important additions to the College endowment and plant, the remodeling of the curriculum in 1912, and the creation of the celebrated Institute of Politics, which met each summer from 1921 to 1932 on the Williams campus and brought the College world-wide recognition.

The pre-war years of Dr. Garfield's administration passed peacefully for the most part. Interest centered upon such activities as the balloon races held with Amherst by the Aeronautical Society, and the formation of the Student Council in 1914. But Victorian society was getting ready to crumble to pieces before the roar of guns, and the social unrest which was abroad as a prelude to the coming clash was reflected even in Williamstown. In 1914 the college was in a violent turmoil over the abolition of the traditional cane rush. Next year there was a vigorous but unsuccessful attempt on the part of certain members of the lower classes to abolish the Gargoyle Society.

Williams survived the petty tumult and shouting. Within three years America joined the European death-struggle, emphasis at Williams was on the military, Garfield left the Berkshires to be National Fuel Administrator, and General Pew, in charge of military activities at Williams, searching for some soldierly character to set up as an ideal for his students, came across the legendary, half-forgotten figure of Colonel Ephraim Williams, and evoked his memory. The Williams cult started by the General reached its climax in 1920, when the remains of the Founder were removed from their Lake George grave and buried with full military honors in the vault of Thompson Memorial Chapel. At the same time there was unveiled upon the walls of the chancel the graven Honor Roll of "The Founder who fell in battle and . . . the sons of Williams who gave their lives that the blessings of free government might endure."

It was as though the final interment of Colonel Williams was a signal for all the forces of cynicism, superficiality, and lawlessness to burst loose from fetters unbroken for years. The wild unprincipled life which was common in the prosperous cities and suburbs during the Roaring Twenties was reflected, with youthful exaggeration upon the campus.

The efforts of the college authorities and of the more responsible undergraduates and alumni to improve conditions had only a slight effect, for it was the disillusion of an age, not individual wickedness, which was expressing itself.

Intellectualism was shallow and cynical, debunking was the fashion, a Phi Beta Kappa key was respected only if it had been obtained without work. The "smoothie" was the idol of the campus, rather than the athlete or the Gargoyle.

One of the few bright spots in the picture came with the donation by Francis Lynde Stetson of an excellent library building, and with the erection of Sage Hall, and in 1928 of Lehman Hall. These buildings provided room for the increased enrollment which followed the first World War, and gave to the college an up-to-date library building to replace Lawrence Hall, which had been built in 1846.

Nevertheless, old Williams, once regarded as "new" Williams, was declining. The onslaught of the depression brought the students a little closer to reality, but there was needed a new hand at the helm. The incumbent administration had been through too much —pre-war, post-war—to be able to lift itself by its boot straps. In 1933 Dr. Garfield resigned; the Trustees chose Dr. Tyler Dennett '04 to succeed him.

Sympathizing little with Williams' conservative distrust of action, Dr. Dennett proceeded to effect many needed reforms in a manner too abrupt for the tastes of most students and alumni. Under his regime the curriculum was strengthened, vigorous new blood added to the faculty, the system of senior comprehensive examinations introduced. If cornered, most Williams men would admit that they approved of the individual measures Dennett was taking, but they could not forgive his sudden dismissal of favorite faculty members, his anti-fraternity attitude, his much misquoted statement that there were "too many nice boys at Williams."

In the summer of 1937 Dr. Dennett resigned in the course of a dispute with the Trustees as to the purchase of the Greylock site. To his successor, James Phinney Baxter, 3rd '14, he turned over a rejuvenated Williams.

The new President, universally well-liked, favored more gradual reform. In September, 1939, war broke out anew. America, firm in its resolve to avoid foreign entanglements, declared neutrality. France fell; only England and Russia remained. In May, 1941, President Baxter urged immediate declaration of war against the Axis. The campus echoed its President's interventionism.

Eight months later the United States was at war. Dr. Baxter led a contingent of Williams professors to Washington where he assumed the position of Deputy Director of the Office of Strategic Services. In his absence, Dr. Richard A. Newhall administered the College as chairman of the faculty.

Readjusting itself to the disruptive effect of war, the College instituted accelerated courses and summer sessions which did not end until 1948. The College administration was faced with a hectic job of coping with a constantly shifting student body and V-12 unit which caused the enrollment to fluctuate from 1,215 to 347 students in the course of two years.

Under President Baxter's tenure of office, the College has made amazing progress. The faculty has grown from 84 to 133, several new professorships have been created and six new majors added to the curriculum. The student body has grown from 850 to 1080, a tenure plan for the faculty and a new and highly improved system of sabbatical leaves have been established. The college also has successfully completed a $2,000,000 Faculty Salary Endowment Campaign making possible a series of salary increases and fringe benefits, including health insurance and, in cases of professors with tenure, assistance in building or purchasing homes.

It was through Dr. Baxter's efforts that the system of major exams and the MIT combined plan allowing students to go to MIT for a degree after completing three years at Williams were created. Dr. Baxter may be credited for the changes in the athletic program. The coaching staff has increased from six to fourteen men while the athletic budget has risen from approximately $70,000 to over $140,000.

A significant change in the ratio of high school to prep school students has occurred since President Baxter took office. In 1937, only one of the four men who came to Williams was a high school student. At present the number of high school entries is approximately the same as incoming prep school students. To encourage able but needy students, the Tyng Scholarships were created, offering worthy candidates one of the outstanding college scholarships in the country.

The Adams Memorial Theatre was largely the result of President Baxter's persuasive powers. The theatre is used for all dramatic presentations, movies, and has come to be regarded as a "model" college theatre.

The administration has not been without its tribulations. The burning of West College in 1950 was a disaster that was only lessened in gravity by the fact that no lives were lost. The reconstruction of this building was completed in the summer of 1952. Thus, the original college building has regained its position of prominence on the campus.

Although the small college's economic struggle is very grave today, President Baxter has managed to complete the construction of new laboratories, a new faculty house ,and the million-and-a-half dollar Student Union, appropriately named after him, and adding more fine facilities to an already fine and growing institution. A new addition to Stetson Library, doubling stack space, is the latest in a long line of improvements.

The Story Of A Street

In 1847 a Williamstown businessman named S. V. R. Hoxsey decided to improve the community by opening up a pleasant little offshoot of Main Street for building lots. It is possible that if Mr. Hoxsey had also been gifted with prophetic vision and had witnessed some results of this action he would have been amazed. The business venture has become a town institution. The little group of private residences has become an impressive double row of shops. The unimportant village lane has become the center of all extra-collegiate activity. In short, Spring Street has arisen.

It is stated in a recent issue of one of our publications that Williams graduates never meet in after-life as members of Greek letter societies, but as brother offspring bound together by a common affection for a single great institution. This is true partly because Williams men want it to be true, but also because there is one unifying factor operative in the life of everyone who studies in the shadow of the hills, and that factor is just a street. Spring Street is common to celebrity and nonentity; to hero and hero-worshipper; to Phi Bete and ex-'31; to Social Registrate in a '58 convertible and tray slinger in a dining room; to fraternity man and non-fraternity man. What son of Eph is there who has not strolled down the sidewalk on a spring evening to applaud the Walden Theatre's current heroine; who has not repeatedly visited the "P. O." in a futile mail hunt; who has not drifted into Harts' or the "C. P." for a leisurely soda after three o'clock, or dashed into the Gym Lunch or the College Restaurant for a hasty coffee before an eight o'clock? Spring Street is not so much a collection of establishments bent on separating the student from his exchequer in as painless and pleasant a manner as possible, as it is the students' stamping ground. It has always been hide-bound by tradition, and after one hundred and eleven years it has also acquired a respectable history.

Spring Street's tradition is manifested in many subtle and delicate ways—in the perpetuity of George Rudnick's famous slogan, "Let George do it"; in the frenzied activity of Ted during a rush hour at the Gym Lunch; in the laughter of old grads retelling anecdotes of Eddie Dempsey or Cabe Prindle or whomever happened to be the local moguls of their college years. Its history is no less intangible. It is not so much a list of dates (though the dates are there) as it is a record of personalities who have, in their various lines, shaped the development of Spring Street and marked the different periods of its story by their presence.

Definite information is lacking about the origin of the street's name. However, it has been fairly well established that a bubbling little spring located in the fields out beyond the waterworks is—indirectly, at least—responsible. (Legend and Logic both have it that Eph Williams himself once drank from the rustic fount, but proof is lacking and research has failed to substantiate the tale.) The street came near taking its name from William Walden, who was then the town's leading citizen, but fame rested lightly on Mr. Walden's shoulders, and he withheld consent.

Williamstown's future market street was in 1847 a quiet lane in a country town, devoid of the business houses which were, in fact, infrequent even around the corner on Main Street. And on Main Street, nestling in the shadow of Griffin Hall, lay the office of Judge Dewey, whose home—once occupied by Delta Upsilon—is now a faculty building called Dewey House. There were other shops and homes farther east along Main Street, among them the residence of that great American peddler, the penny-pinching Fisk, father of Wall Street's famous Jim. Also on Main Street was the shop of Timothy and John Whitman, who around 1800 had migrated to Williamstown much as, some hundred and thirty years later the merchants Walsh were to make the journey across the state and establish here a sister clothing store to the one at Amherst.

Ten years later, in 1857, Sigma Phi purchased one of Hoxsey's building lots on Spring Street and established thereon what is believed to be the first house erected by a college fraternity for its own use. Life was simple in those days but through the idyllic peace and quiet, the muffled drums of progress could be heard abroad; the face of Spring Street began to change, and in 1871, having lost the privacy they desired, the Sigs gave up their house and moved to more secluded regions. A memento of their stay is not lacking, however, for the old dwelling, having been shunted back and forth from one leasee to another for several years, finally attained the ne plus ultra for fraternity houses: it was acquired by Hiram Walden, and transformed into the theatre named after him. In case anybody is interested in pursuing this matter further, he might investigate the building's north wall, which still contains the original Sigma Phi bricks. In an extreme case he might even consult Cal King, the present owner, who undoubtedly could tell some intriguing tales about the old place.

In the Nineties greater wealth came to the pockets of Williams men; contemporaneous with that wealth Spring Street moved toward its financial maturity. In 1891 Cabe Prindle, the active sports enthusiast, (who claimed almost never to have missed a Williams varsity game), went into business; and in 1895 the genial Eddie Dempsey established his famous pool parlor which was in those days the headquarters for all matters not strictly collegiate. Twenty-seven years later, still going strong, he was to erect the Dempsey Building, which now houses the College Pharmacy and the College Restaurant. Fred Walden and Eddie continued to run the Pharmacy jointly as partners until the spring of 1939, when Fred and Joe Gleason, who formerly was employed in Harts', took it over. In this period Bastien opened his jewelry shop, the George M. Hopkins Furniture Store, now run by Everett Miller, was opened, and in 1901 M. Salvatore, father of the present owners, founded Spring Street's oldest shoe outfitting establishment.

In 1902, so the folklore of the district would have us believe, the renowned and ever-popular George Rudnick alighted at the Williamstown depot. George began as an old-clothes man, pure if not simple, and it is whispered that in those early days he was wont to borrow money from a harness maker, buy suits from students at firesale prices, and sell them over at North Adams, repaying the lender upon his return. George's first store was located near the station and he built the present shop (underneath which, incidentally, public baths were once available) on Spring Street some time later. Here, in his earlier years, he was accustomed to employ the old gag of "cutting the book" in his monetary dealings with students. "Six dollars," his customer would say, and "Ten dollars!" George would insist, after which they would settle the matter by calling odds and evens, opening a book at random, and letting the page number decide it. Probably the prime reason for George's success was not the penny hoarding of which he has been accused, but a genuine ability as merchant and investor combined with a likeable personality. Popular opinion placed him among the twenty-five richest men in the United States, but there may have been a little exaggeration. Of course, their present prominence in the cleaning field is due to the fact that the Rudnicks work now, and always have worked, as a unit, striving for a common success, and sharing the bad and good times alike. George's death saddened all students who knew him and his passing marked the end of another venerable

Williams tradition leaving the Rudnick affairs in charge of his three sons Louis '15, Phil '23, and Cy.

The Twenties were years of fabulous profits. Money was so easy that students arriving by train in Albany or Troy after a weekend were perfectly willing to pay eighteen dollars and take a taxi back to college. To add to the general confusion, many students emulated the Spring Street merchants (who did a rushing business all during the boom years) and picked up spare cash in odd and diverting ways. Well-known is the instance of the senior who sold an incoming freshman his last year's radiators at the cut-rate price of five dollars and then, to cap the climax, collected a bet from a classmate for accomplishing the feat.

Naturally this epoch, like all, had to end, and end it did. The depression put a stop to the extravagance and Williams today is undoubtedly a far saner place than it was in 1928.

The present layout of Spring Street is not radically different from what it was during prohibition or the pre-war era, but the Street is nonetheless reflecting the influence of a rapidly changing environment. Rudnick revamped its system with more modern cleaning methods; a few faces were lifted, but Spring Street generally languished and remained quiescent until after V-J day when it began to feel more comfortable about prospects for the college.

Ted Cochinos is the present owner of the Gym Lunch, known simply as the "Grim Gym." Echoing to the oftheard call "draw one", it is the nearest equivalent to a subway during rush hour. Harold Raithel runs the thriving College Restaurant next door, chiefly distinguished as the never-failing source of suds for thirsty Ephmen. Jack Henderson, an old hand at clothing Williams men, and Lou Therrien, ex-marine, are the proprietors of the Williams Co-op, a well stocked suitery with modern facade. The House of Walsh is another men's shop run by suave Tom and Phil who exhibit the height of selling technique.

When desserts aren't up to par the College Pharmacy offers a full line of soda fountain favorites, along with Harts' Drugstore. Ray Washburne, owner of the College Bookstore, had about the nearest thing to a monopoly until last year when Joe Dewey set up the Williams Bookstore across the street. Cabe Prindle's pool emporium, a popular meeting place for Williams men in the twenties, has been transformed into Clark's five and ten cent store.

Although Spring Street's storefronts may appear to the outsider somewhat battered and worn by weather and time, there is, nevertheless, an essential flavor which will always remain the same to Williams men and their sons.

Buildings

WEST COLLEGE, built in 1790, just before the founding of Williams, was destroyed by fire in December of 1950. Reconstruction within the old walls was soon begun, and it was readied for occupancy by the fall of 1952. It contains doubles and triples, with accommodations for forty-eight men.

EAST COLLEGE, built in 1798, was burned in 1841 and rebuilt in 1842. Entire interior gutted and reconstructed during summer of 1956 using unusual construction methods and utilizing prefabricated steel and concrete slabs and partitions. Has accommodations for forty-eight men.

GRIFFIN HALL, built in 1828 and moved and remodeled in 1934, is used for recitations. The interior was completely renovated during summer of 1952.

FAYERWEATHER HALL, formerly known as South College, was built in 1842 and was remodeled and enlarged in 1905; entire interior was reconstructed during the summer of 1957. It has accommodations for sixty-one men.

LAWRENCE HALL, used as the main library before Stetson Hall was completed now houses the College art collection. It was built in 1846, and enlarged in 1890. It was again enlarged in 1926 and has since been used for classrooms and offices by the Art department. An addition to Lawrence Hall has recently been constructed to house the Edwin A. Blashfield collection. The entire interior was redecorated in 1957.

GOODRICH HALL, formerly the Alumni Hall and Chapel, was built in 1859. It was remodeled and converted into classrooms and seminar rooms in 1905.

MORGAN HALL, built in 1882, has dormitory accommodations for one hundred and twelve men. A portion of the interior was damaged by fire and repaired in 1904-05. This building was thoroughly renovated before being reopened early in 1946; renovated again during summers of 1955 and 1956.

LASELL GYMNASIUM, the gift of the widow of Josiah Lasell, 1844, and her son, Josiah M. Lasell '86, was built in 1886, and completely remodeled and enlarged in 1928. It now has a large gymnasium proper which is used for basketball and volleyball and freshman and sophomore physical training classes, a floor for freshman basketball and badminton, a large swimming pool, a running track, showers, lockers, exercise rooms, provision for wrestling and indoor tennis practice and offices for instructors of physical education.

HOPKINS HALL, the administration building, contains the offices of the President, Dean, Dean of Freshmen, Director of Admissions, Registrar, Treasurer and Director of Student Aid. Official College bulletins and undergraduate notices are posted in the hall on the first floor. Ten recitation rooms and the mathematics library occupy the remaining floors of the building. Hopkins Hall was built in 1890, in memory of President Mark Hopkins, was remodeled in 1909, and completely renovated in summer of 1955.

THE THOMPSON LABORATORIES, three separate buildings, containing the departments of biology, chemistry and physics, were built in the years 1892-93, and were a gift of the late Frederick Ferris Thompson, 1856, of New York City. The Chemical Laboratory was destroyed by fire on December 7, 1915. However, through the generosity of Mrs. Thompson, this building was reconstructed with greatly improved facilities. A new library room was completed and remodeling was done in the summer of 1957.

President Baxter during 1950-51 conducted a fund raising drive in order to add important extensions to the biology and physics laboratories and to provide for extensive physical improvements in the existing buildings. The goal of $1,000,000 was reached and in the fall of 1951 President Conant of Harvard University dedicated the vastly improved Thompson Laboratories.

JESUP HALL, presented to the College in 1899 by Morris K. Jesup to provide facilities for student activities, was remodeled in 1908, and repaired again in the summer of 1937 after fire had ravaged the interior. The first floor houses the offices of the Alumni Secretary and the College News Director. The Football Coaches Office and those of the Buildings and Grounds Department are located on the second floor, in addition to the auditorium, which is constantly used during the year for lectures. The third floor is devoted to offices for the Gul and the WOC, as well as dormitory accommodations for the president of the W. C. C. Some remodeling and painting including complete renovation of the auditorium and installation of a new heating plant is to be done this summer.

THE THOMPSON MEMORIAL CHAPEL, given to the College by Mrs. Frederick Ferris Thompson in memory of her husband, is considered by many to be one of the most beautiful college chapels in America. The building, constructed in 1904, has a seating capacity of approximately eight hundred.

BERKSHIRE HALL, built in 1905, is a dormitory for fifty-three. The interiors of the middle and north entries were redecorated in the summer of 1957.

CURRIER HALL was built in 1908 and extensively renovated in the summer of 1954. It now contains dormitory accommodations for fifty-five students and the Department of Music.

THE THOMPSON INFIRMARY, opened in 1911, was built through the kindness of Mrs. Frederick Ferris Thompson. The building is modern throughout and includes a completely equipped operating room, X-ray apparatus, open and covered porches, and an isolation ward for contagious diseases. It provides accommodations for approximately twenty-five patients, and serves as the college health center.

WILLIAMS HALL, a freshman dormitory with accommodations for ninety-six men, was completed in 1911. The interior was completely renovated three years ago.

CHAPIN HALL, the College auditorium, was presented to the College in 1911 by the Hon. Alfred Clark Chapin '69. Built in the Georgian style, it is one of the most beautiful buildings on the campus. The hall contains a four-manual organ of eighty-eight stops, with electric action and movable console. Besides the auditorium itself, the building contains the Trustees' Room and a room for the use of the debating, oratorical and dramatic organizations. The roof was rebuilt during the summer of 1953. A new language laboratory was installed in the basement the summer of 1957.

THE HOPKINS OBSERVATORY, the oldest college observatory still in use, was begun in 1835 by Professor Albert Hopkins and was completed in 1838. It contains apparatus for use in connection with courses in astronomy.

CLARK HALL, the gift of Edward Clark, LL.D., 1831, was built in 1908 to replace a former structure built in 1881 for the same purposes. It contains, besides a geological museum and seismograph, the offices, lecture rooms, classrooms and laboratories of the Department of Geology. It was completely renovated in the summer of 1954.

STETSON HALL, the College Library, was built in 1922, as the result of a bequest by Francis Lynde Stetson '67. It is built in Georgian style, similar to that of Chapin, Williams and Sage Halls. An addition was constructed in 1956. The various reading rooms will seat more than 200 students, and 100 desks for individual study are located in the stack areas. The stack has a capacity of 368,000 volumes. Fifty-three faculty offices are located in the building, as are the Whiteman Collection and the Roper Public Opinion Research Center. The Williamsiana Collection of materials about the College and its alumni is a part of the Library. The Chapin Library, a collection of over 13,000 rare books and associated items founded by Alfred Clark Chapin '69, occupies part of the second floor of Stetson Hall.

SAGE HALL, a freshman dormitory, contains accommodations for one hundred and eight men. Completed during the latter part of 1923, the building incorporates all the latest features of dormitory construction and forms a part of the Freshman Quadrangle. The interior was also completely renovated in 1954.

THE FIELD HOUSE provides dressing room facilities for varsity and freshmen. The building has showers, lockers and a rubbing room.

WILLIAMS HALL ANNEX, located off Lynde Lane, is a reconverted pre-war dormitory which now houses six faculty couples.

LEHMAN HALL, the gift of Herbert H. Lehman '99, ex-Governor and former Senator from New York State, was constructed in 1928 as part of the group of freshman dormitories. It provides rooms for twenty-eight underclassmen and four junior advisers. Entirely renovated in the summer of 1955.

STETSON ROAD APARTMENTS, a new $100,000.00 apartment house, contains quarters for twelve faculty families. It stands between Lynde Lane and Cole Field on Stetson Road. This building was constructed for permanent use.

GREYLOCK HALL, originally a wing of the Greylock Hotel which was torn down in 1937, was completely refinished on the interior in 1954. It provides spacious dormitory accommodations.

OLD FACULTY HOUSE, which was given a new "face" during the summer of 1956, contains the Placement Bureau Offices and faculty living quarters. The interior was remodeled in 1957 into a modern Placement Bureau.

THE SQUASH COURTS, donated by Clark Williams '92, John P. Wilson '00, and Quincy Bent '01, were built in 1937 The building contains fourteen singles courts and one doubles court.

FACULTY HOUSE, completed in the winter of 1938-39, is a gift of Clark Williams '92, and his wife. It serves as a club for faculty and their wives.

ADAMS MEMORIAL THEATRE was completed March 1, 1942, and officially dedicated at Commencement time. The brick building was built on the site of the former Abbey Flats on Main Street, a short distance west of the Faculty House. The theatre, which has a seating capacity of over 400, is modern in every respect and completely equipped for any kind of stage presentation.

ALUMNI HOUSE, located on Spring Street, is an old college property rebuilt and much enlarged by funds donated for the purpose by Alumni, who congregate in it in large numbers on football weekends, at Commencement time and on other occasions. It is available to students only when they are the invited guests of parents or other alumni.

MATHER HOUSE, restored in 1956, is now used as faculty apartments and honors workshop. The area used for honors work is completely furnished with antiques.

Athletic Fields

COLE FIELD - Cole Field, a large tract of land near the Hoosic River, provides the focal point for varsity and freshman lacrosse, varsity and freshman soccer, and freshman football and baseball. The area is also used for all varsity football sessions except for regularly scheduled games, which are played on Weston Field.

WESTON FIELD - Situated within easy reach of the Gymnasium and other college buildings, Weston Field affords an excellent site for football and baseball contests. The Gargoyle Gate guards the entrance to the field which includes a one-third mile cinder track, board track, and various other track and field facilities. A covered grandstand occupies the northwest corner of the field while bleachers of permanent steel and concrete construction have been erected on the west and east sides of the field. The field also features a newly enlarged press box and an auxiliary building containing spacious team rooms and locker and storage space.

COLLEGE TENNIS COURTS. The eighteen college tennis courts are open to all undergraduates. They are located on Lynde Lane, just off of the Cole Field road, and include six green-tinted asphalt courts. The New England Intercollegiate Tournament was held here four years ago.

TACONIC GOLF LINKS. Any student may obtain a weekday membership in the Taconic Golf Club upon payment of $14.40 for the fall term and $18.00 in the spring. A full membership, good on Saturdays and Sunday also, costs $18.00 and $24.00 respectively. The greens fee, $3.50 on a weekday for non-members, is only $1.50 for Williams students. The 61st NCAA Golf Tournament was held on the course this summer.

HOCKEY RINK. An outdoor artificial ice hockey rink was completed in the spring of 1953. Located on the Old Campus, the $100,000 all-winter rink includes 9½ miles of pipe, a large shed for machinery and equipment, new dasher boards, and overhead lights. It affords an opportunity for both freshman and varsity practice, intercollegiate contests, intramural competition as well as undergraduate and public pleasure skating.

BASEBALL CAGE. The dirt-floor Baseball Cage is located on the edge of the Old Campus and is used for early spring varsity and freshman baseball practice, and for track practice.

Williams Songs

The following are selected from the Songs of Williams. They are frequently sung and every undergraduate is expected to know them:

THE MOUNTAINS

Words and Music by Dr. Washington Gladden '59
(This is the oldest American College song written by an undergraduate)

O, proudly rise the monarchs of our mountain land
With their kingly forest robes to the sky,
Where Alma Mater dwelleth with her chosen band,
And the peaceful river floweth gently by.

CHORUS:
The mountains! the mountains! we greet them with a song
Whose echoes, rebounding their woodland heights along,
Shall mingle with anthems that winds and fountains sing,
Till hill and valley gaily, gaily, ring.

The snows of Winter crown them with a crystal crown,
And the silver clouds of Summer round them cling;
The Autumn's scarlet mantle flows in richness down,
And they revel in the garniture of Spring.

O, mightily they battle with a storm-king's power;
And conquerors shall triumph here for aye
Yet quietly their shadows fall at evening hour,
While the gentle breezes round them softly play.

Beneath their peaceful shadows may old Williams stand
'Til sun and mountains never more shall be
The glory and the honor of our mountain land,
And the dwelling of the gallant and the free.

OUR MOTHER

Words and Music by C. F. Brown '09
(This song won the first interclass singing contest on May 30, 1908)

'Twas in the days of long ago,
In a valley, 'neath the mountain wall,
Our Alma Mater dear was born,
The mother of us all.

And through countless years her fame has grown
Till now in glory bright,
Immortal ever reigning o'er us,
She stands in all her might.

CHORUS:

Hail! Alma Mater!
Hail to thy name!
Ye sons who know her love,
Sing to her fame, forever,
Long may she glorious, triumphant be
Bright through the future years,
Our mother, here's to thee.

Long may we dearly cherish her
And ever rest beneath her hand;
Whene'er she calls with loyal hearts
Together let us stand.
May evermore her song of triumph
Throughout our mountains ring;
May evermore her sons, victorious,
Thus to old Williams sing.

'NEATH THE SHADOW OF THE HILLS

T. M. Banks '90

No need to sing the praises
  Of any dusty town;
Where grand old Greylock raises
  Its stately wooded crown.
We list to nature's voices,
  The music of her rills,
And each loyal heart rejoices
  'Neath the shadow of the hills.

And when to our Berkshire valley
  Our feet shall turn again
When Williams' sons shall rally
  From the busy haunts of men.
When the same blue sky is o'er us,
  One love our bosom fills,
Then we'll shout some grand old chorus
  'Neath the shadow of the hills.

YARD BY YARD

L. S. Potter '10 H. B. Wood '10

C. F. Brown '09

(This song won the 1909 singing contest)

Come all ye sons of Williams sing,
  As we march on the field,
Cheer till the hills and valleys ring,
There's never a thought to yield.
We'll back the team thro' every game,
With them in every play,
Fling out the purple, hail!
For once again comes Williams' day.

CHORUS:

Yard by yard we'll fight our way
  Thro' Amherst's line,
Every man in every play,
  Striving all the time.
Cheer on cheer will rend the air,
  All behind our men.
And we'll fight for dear old Williams
  And we'll win and win again.

EPHRAIM WILLIAMS

Arranged by H. C. Taylor '99

Oh, here's to the health of Eph Williams,
Who founded a school in Billville;
And when he was scalped by the Indians,
He left us his boodle by will. Sing.

CHORUS:

Tou-re-lei, ou-re-lei-a-dy,
Sing tou-re-lei, ou-re-lei-a,
Sing tou-re-lei-ou-re-lei-a-dy,
Sing tou-re-lei, ou-re-lei-a.

This school it grew into a college,
Renowned for baseball and free trade;
And many a statesman and scholar,
Old Ephraim's boodle has made. Sing

And here's to old Fort Massachusetts,
And here's to the old Mohawk Trail;
And here's to historical Peri,
Who grinds out his sorrowful tale. Sing

B. T. Bartlett '95

F. W. Memmott '95

F. D. Goodwin '95

If you ask us why our mother
Took the Purple for her choice,
And why each loyal brother
At its beauty should rejoice;
'Tis because this color choosing,
Wise monarchs wear with pride,
And when our boys seem losing,
The Purple turns the tide.

CHORUS:

Some vaunt the crimson, some the blue,
And some their honest green;
We're to the regal color true,
Of Berkshire's peerless Queen.
Tho' rivals fain would score it,
And, mingle it with white,
It's our grand old Royal Purple,
And we triumph in its might.

They may drive us back by inches,
We strive to get the ball;
We hold our own by clinches,
Their gains are always small.
Their rushes may be clever,
Their interference fine;
There comes their last endeavor,
We're on our "Five Yard Line."

CHORUS:

They may lead us every inning,
We keep them hard at work;
And with little chance of winning,
We not a moment shirk.
They may be batting strongly,
Their fielding may be great;
You reason matters wrongly,
The ninth will make all straight.

CHORUS:

While in life's stern game we're striving
Our pluck can never fail;
That firmness still surviving,
We're never known to quail.
Then we show a spirit royal,
As in the ninth our nine,
There's still a "Stone Wall" loyal,
When we're on our "Five Yard Line."

CHORUS:

COME FILL YOUR GLASSES UP

H. S. Patterson '96

(To the tune of Sousa's "Corcoran Cadets")

Come fill your glasses up
To Williams, to Williams, to Williams;
Come fill your loving cup
To Williams, to Williams, to Williams;
We will drink our wine tonight,
Drink the wine that makes hearts light;
Come fill your glasses up
To Williams, to Williams, to Williams

Come sing our marching song
To Williams, to Williams, to Williams;
Sing as we march along
From Williams, from Williams, from Williams.
We will rally on Pratt Field,
We will make our rivals yield;
Victory shall crown the shield
Of Williams, of Williams, of Williams.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES

ORGANIZATIONS AND COMPETITIONS

Gargoyle

Gargoyle, established in 1895, is a senior honor society with a maximum membership of twenty men. These men are publicly chosen from members of the junior class in a ceremony that takes place at the conclusion of the spring term. The object of the Gargoyle Society is to discuss college matters, take active steps for the advancement of Williams in every branch of college life and work, and exert itself against anything detrimental to such advancement.

On entering college every freshman has an equal chance to gain the distinction of election to Gargoyle, regardless of social standing, race, creed, or wealth. Each senior Gargoyle delegation, after careful deliberation, chooses the members of the succeeding delegation, endeavoring to select men who have shown in their college life a desire and ability to promote the best interests of Williams. The spirit of a man's service is quite as important as the degree of effort which he puts forth.

Work, not its reward, is the chief aim of the Society; far more than a mere honor, election to Gargoyle means an opportunity for further service to Williams, for the fostering of the Williams spirit and the extension of its influence to create and maintain whatever is best for the welfare of the College.

The Purple Key Society

The Purple Key Society of Williams was founded 31 years ago to act as a reception committee for all visiting athletic teams and to work with the Athletic Council on matters pertaining to the improvement of athletics. The Purple Key was composed of the captains and managers of all varsity athletic teams with the Director of Athletics acting as its adviser. In the past few years the Purple Key became a non-functional group and was therefore, disbanded in '55. Gargoyle took up the matter and concluded that the past Purple Key Societies had been handicapped by: being an organization too large to function efficiently, apathy on the part of most of its members, and the inability to perform well its essential task of greeting visiting teams. Gargoyle felt this organization had many important functions that would be of service to the college, and they proposed a new Purple Key Constitution. Under mandate from the College Council a committee of twelve juniors under the leadership of Edward McKee '57, was appointed to organize and revise the mechanics of the Constitution, to make plans for the future functions of Purple Key and to select the first group of the Society.

The main objects of the Purple Key are: (a) to greet and entertain representatives from other colleges and institutions while they are guests of Williams College; (b) to act as liaison between the Athletic Department and the student body, offering and promoting objective proposals to the Athletic Department for improving athletics at Williams; (c) at the discretion of the administration and the Key, to perform any other services for the college.

Student Government

The Student Government consists of two bodies, the governing College Council and the fraternity Social Council.

THE COLLEGE COUNCIL (CC)

The College Council is designed to be the directing force of undergraduate activities. It deals with collegewide problems, in an attempt to develop a spirit of unity and cooperation on the Williams Campus. The Constitution provides for three CC committees: the Honor System and Discipline Committee, the Student Union Committee, and the Rules, Nominations and Elections Committee.

Membership is on a class basis, each class being represented by its President, Secretary-Treasurer, and government representative. The President of the Social Council is also a member. The Editor of The Record sits in a non-voting capacity.

Officers 1958 - 1959

John W. Hyland, Jr. '59 ..... President
D. Mackey Hassler, II '59 ..... Vice-President
Keith B. Griffin '60 ..... Secretary
Palmer H. White '59 ..... Treasurer

THE HONOR SYSTEM AND DISCIPLINE COMMITTEE

Under the new Constitution, the Honor System and the Discipline Committees have been combined.

All College examinations are conducted under an honor system, established in 1896, by which the presence of proctors in the examination room is dispensed with and each student is placed on his honor. He is free during examinations to move about, to speak to his companions, and to leave the room at any time, provided that he does not disturb others. The following statement must be signed to make any examination or other work written on the paper in the classroom valid: I have neither given nor received aid in this examination.

All cases of suspected fraud are dealt with by the Honor System and Discipline Committee. This committee has the power to decide on the question of guilt and to recommend to the Faculty the penalty of dismissal from college in the case of a senior, junior, or sophomore, and suspension in the case of a freshman. The Honor System will be explained during Freshman Week.

The Honor System and Discipline Committee meets jointly with the Faculty Discipline Committee to pass on matters pertaining to the conduct of members of the student body. Every undergraduate is required to be thoroughly familiar with the College Regulations set forth in the booklet on college rules. Violations of these regulations make an individual liable to disciplinary action by this committee.

1958 - 1959

D. Mackey Hassler, II, Chairman
C. Henry Foltz
Leonard Grey
Ronald D. Stegall
Robert C. Rorke
Richard Warch
Kenneth L. Jones, Jr.
Jared Rardin

COUNCIL COMMITTEE OF FINANCE

In 1957, a new organization entitled the Council Committee of Finance was established to control and coordinate the finances of extra-curricular activities. Headed by the Treasurer of the College Council, the CCF interviews representatives from each of the twenty-three campus organizations, works out yearly budgets for each of them, and formulates the student activities tax which is assessed to each student at the beginning of the college year.

Palmer H. White '59 ..... Chairman

THE SOCIAL COUNCIL

The Social Council is concerned with social unit matters, as distinct from all-college problems. It is composed of the presidents of all the fifteen fraternities. It has its own financial body, the Treasurer's Council, to handle affairs peculiar to the fraternity system. Rushing matters must be decided jointly by both the CC and SC.

Officers 1958 - 1959

Richard C. Wydick '59 ..... President
Peter S. Willmott '59 ..... Secretary-Treasurer

COLLEGE COUNCIL CONSTITUTION

Article I: Name and Purpose

SECTION 1: Name: The student governing body of Williams College shall be called the College Council.

SECTION 2: Purpose and Powers:

A. The purpose of this organization shall be to promote the ideals of Williams College; to provide a controlling and directing force for every phase of undergraduate activity not directly administered by the faculty and administration; to foster a spirit of unity and cooperation among the students of the college; to develop among the students a sense of personal responsibility for their own conduct and the welfare of the college; to foster administrative consideration of undergraduate opinions and desires; and to pass such legislation as should be consistent with the aforesaid.

B. The College Council may pass binding legislation on all matters concerning the student body of Williams College except as specifically limited by this Constitution. It may levy student taxes.

Article II: Membership

SECTION 1: The College Council shall be composed of the following voting members:

A. The President and Secretary-Treasurer of the Junior, Sophomore, and Freshman classes for the second semester of the college year; the President and Secretary-Treasurer of the Senior, Junior, and Sophomore classes for the first semester of the college year.

B. Six elected Class Representatives: three from the Junior, two from the Sophomore and one from the Freshman class for the second semester of the college year; three from the Senior, two from the Junior, and one from the Sophomore class for the first semester of the college year.

C. The President of the Social Council.

D. The President and Vice President of the Freshman Entry Representatives for the first semester of the college year.

E. Prior to, and until, the election of the President and Vice President of the Freshman Entry Representatives, the President of the Junior Advisers.

F. The retiring President of the College Council and the President of the Senior Class for the second semester of the college year. The Secretary-Treasurer shall serve in the place of the President of the Senior Class if the President is the retiring President of the College Council.

G. A Council member must fill a directly elected position in preference to an indirectly elected position.

SECTION 2: Non-Voting members:

A. The President of the Junior Advisers and the Editor-in-Chief of the Williams Record shall be non-voting members of the College Council.

B. The college administration shall be represented in a non-voting capacity by the Dean or a deputy acting for him.

C. Members of the undergraduate body may and should sit with the College Council in an advisory capacity.

Article III: Officers

SECTION 1: Selection:

A. The President and the Vice President of the College Council shall be elected by the Council from the Council. When elected they shall be members of the Junior class.

B. The Secretary and the Treasurer of the College Council shall be elected by the Council from the Council.

C. These officers shall be elected at the first meeting of the new Council.

SECTION 2: Functions:

A. The President of the College Council shall preside at meetings of the Council, appoint such special committees as shall be deemed necessary by the Council, and serve as an intermediary between the Council and other groups.

B. The Vice President of the College Council shall assist the President in his duties and assume the chair in the event of the President's absence. He shall serve as Chairman of the Honor System and Discipline Committee.

C. The Secretary of the College Council shall record the minutes of the Council meetings, care for all correspondence, notify members of meetings, and act as custodian of all Council papers and properties. In the event both the President and Vice President of the College Council are absent the Secretary shall occupy the Chair.

D. The Treasurer shall handle the financial concerns of the College Council and shall represent the Council on the Council Committee of Finance. In the event that the President, Vice President, and Secretary are absent the Treasurer shall occupy the Chair.

Article IV: Organization and Procedure

SECTION 1: The newly elected members of the College Council shall take office one week after election.

SECTION 2: The College Council shall meet once a week unless the members of the Council decide otherwise. The Council shall meet no less than twice a month, while college is in session.

SECTION 3: Attendance shall be taken at all meetings of the College Council. After five absences a fine of five dollars per absence shall be levied.

SECTION 4: Parliamentary Procedure shall govern all meetings of the College Council.

SECTION 5: Three-fourths of the voting members of the College Council shall constitute a quorum.

SECTION 6: All decisions of the College Council shall be by majority vote except as specifically specified by this Constitution.

SECTION 7: With the exception of procedural matters all votes shall be by roll call.

SECTION 8: The Williams Record, either in a weekly column or news stories, shall inform the student body of significant matters transacted at Council Meetings. A Record reporter shall attend all meetings.

SECTION 9: The College Council shall publish the minutes, resolutions, and proposals of each meeting. This information shall be distributed to all the social units and places of student activity. The Secretary of the College Council shall supervise the distribution of this information. The agenda for the next meeting shall be published as far in advance as possible. All roll call votes shall be published.

SECTION 10: Once every two weeks, on a day and time to be specified by the Council, there shall be informal class discussions led by class Council members concerning any matters that the College Council has discussed or acted upon or proposes to discuss or act upon in the future, and to receive suggestions concerning possible action from interested undergraduates.

SECTION 11: In matters where a direct expression of student sentiment is needed, the President of the Social Council shall be delegated to obtain such an expression through the members of the Social Council. Non-Affiliates and Freshmen shall be polled by the Rules, Nominations and Elections Committee.

Article: V: Elections

SECTION 1: Elections shall take place within two weeks of the opening of the second semester of the school.

SECTION 2: Elections shall be by preferential vote for the number of offices to be filled in each class. All ballots must be completed to be valid.

SECTION 3: The following shall be elected:

A. For the Freshmen: A President, Secretary-Treasurer, and one representative.
B. For the Sophomores: A President, Secretary-Treasurer, and two representatives.
C. For the Juniors: A President, Secretary-Treasurer, and three repesentatives.

SECTION 4: Nominations shall be by petition. Forty signatures from the electing class shall be necessary to place a student on the ballot, and no person may sign more than three petitions.

Article VI: Committees

SECTION 1: Honor System and Discipline Committee:

A. Composition: The Honor System and Discipline Committee shall consist of the Vice President of the College Council, who shall serve as Chairman, the President of the Junior Advisers, and six other students elected by the College Council. Three of these, one from each class, shall be members of the Council, three, one from each class, shall be selected from the undergraduate body at large. At least two of these shall have served on the outgoing committee.
B. This Committee shall administer the Honor System and decide questions of guilt in any matter concerning violations of the Honor System.
C. This Committee shall recommend rules of conduct to the College Council and the College Administration. It shall pass judgment upon and impose penalties for infringement of College Council rules.

D. This Committee sitting with the Faculty Discipline Committee shall pass judgment upon and recommend penalties to the Dean on matters arising from infringement of College rules.

SECTION 2: The Student Union Committee:

A. The Chairman of the Student Union Committee shall be appointed by the President of the College Council acting upon the recommendations of the Rules, Nominations and Elections Committee and the Director of Student Union Activities.

B. Composition: The members shall be appointed by the President of the College Council acting upon the recommendations of the Rules, Nominations, and Elections Committee, the Director of Student Union Activities and the Chairman of the Committee. It shall include the Vice President of the Junior Advisers and the Chairman of the Freshman Social Committee.

C. Functions: The Student Union Committee shall formulate and administer policy with regard to social and cultural activities within the Student Union.

SECTION 3: Rules, Nominations and Elections Committee:

A. Composition: The Rules, Nominations, and Elections Committee shall consist of four members of the College Council elected by the Council. The Chairman shall be chosen by the committee from the committee.

B. This Committee shall conduct all class elections, special elections, and shall perform any necessary polling of opinion. Election procedure must be approved by the College Council. This Committee shall nominate members for Standing Committees.

Article VII: The Social Council

SECTION 1: Composition: The Social Council shall be composed of the head of each social unit or his representative. For the convenience of administering plans for houseparties and other all-college functions, the Social Council shall work in conjunction with representatives of the Freshman Class and Non-Affiliates, if they so desire.

SECTION 2: Functions: The Social Council shall discuss and formulate policy for social unit matters and shall organize and supervise the management of the aforesaid.

SECTION 3: Powers: Any decision of the Social Council that concerns and affects only the social units shall be final. Any decision of the Social Council which the College Council sees as affecting the whole college as well as the social units must be approved by the College Council. When conflicts arise solutions must be drawn up by a joint committee of the Social Council and the College Council and submitted to each of these bodies for final approval.

SECTION 4: Rushing: Legislation concerning rushing may originate in either council but must be approved by both the Social Council and the College Council to be valid.

SECTION 5: All legislation passed by the Social Council shall be read into the minutes of the College Council.

SECTION 6: The Social Council shall have the power to organize any committees necessary to carry on its functions.

SECTION 7: The President of the Social Council shall be elected by the Council from the Council. The President shall be a member of the College Council; he shall not serve on the College Council in a dual capacity.

Article VIII: Amendments and Referendum

SECTION 1: Amendments shall be proposed either by a two-thirds vote of the College Council or by a petition signed by fifteen per cent of the student body. Amendments shall be ratified by a two-thirds vote of at least 50 per cent of the student body. Amendments proposed by the petitioning student body or by the College Council shall be referred to the student body for a vote within two weeks of the proposal.

SECTION 2: Initiative or referendum on College Council legislation shall be proposed by a petition signed by ten per cent of the student body. Such proposals for initiative or referendum shall be voted upon by the student body within two weeks of the proposal. A simple majority of 50 per cent of the student body shall be necessary for effecting the initiative or referendum.

Article IX: Effective Date

This Amendment shall be effective two weeks after it has been ratified. Initial elections shall be held within two weeks of this date and shall be organized and supervised by the Undergraduate Council.

Article X: Amendments

1. The College Council shall legislate upon the activities of non-athletic organizations; upon the supervision and control of the funds derived from taxes upon non-athletic organizations and shall supervise the management, the debts, and the obligations of the non-athletic organizations; it shall take such action as may seem appropriate in the case of an organization's failure to operate within an approved budget; it shall report publicly upon, discipline, or in extreme cases, close organizations whose financial operations are not a credit to the College. The College Council shall determine annually the balance of a Student Activities Tax.
2. Permanent senior class officers (President, Secretary-Treasurer, Speaker, Class Agent, Marshals) shall be elected at the time of the other College Council elections in a separate class meeting.
3. No person may hold more than one of the following offices: President or Vice President of the College Council, President of Gargoyle, President of the Social Council, Editor-in-Chief of the Record, or Class President.

NON-ATHLETIC ACTIVITIES

The non-athletic competitions listed in the following section of this Handbook are under the jurisdiction of the Council Committee of Finance and under the supervision of its various members.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE CHAPEL

The Williams College Chapel is the organization that sponsors, supervises, and co-ordinates all the religious work of the campus. The purpose of the Chapel is: "through worship, study, and action to deepen the religious life of the students of Williams College." Membership is open to any student who is interested in the purpose and program of the Chapel.

The work of the WCC is administered by various committees, the chairmen of which, along with the officers of the WCC, form an administrative Cabinet. The committees include:

1. Boys' Club - Undergraduates supervise a regular athletic, recreational and social program for the members of the Williamstown Boys' Club. The Club has its own clubhouse and a summer camp located in the mountains just outside of town.

2. Deputations - An interesting form of work that involves helping local churches through filling pulpits, teaching Sunday School classes, and leading young people's groups.

3. Welfare - A committee organized to supervise help-projects in the Williamstown area. Last year two churches were completely renovated and a summer camp made ready for campers through the efforts of the Williams and Smith Welfare groups.

4. Study Group - A committee which sponsors religious embassies and forums and other discussion and study groups.

5. Chest Fund - This committee takes charge of the annual College Community Chest drive. The only monetary appeal for charity made during the year by a student organization, the Community Chest collected $5,000 last year.

6. Inter-college - This committee sends delegates to the various New England religious conferences held during the year and acts as a liaison with the Student Christian Movement.

7. Publicity - A committee to keep all members of the WCC informed about the plans of the organization and publicize its work to the campus.

8. Worship - A committee composed of the Board members which supervises the Sunday and daily Chapel services and selects the speakers.

PROF. H. WILLIAM OLIVER REV. LAWRENCE DE BOER

MEMBERSHIP:

Open to all with Religious and Welfare interests.

COMPETITION:

There is no actual competition for membership in the WCC. Membership is open to all students in the college. Early in the fall, a freshman smoker or dinner is held at which time those interested may sign up under any one of the eight committees.

Membership on the Board is determined by the amount of work the individuals on the committees do. The outgoing chairman recommends to the Board the individual on his committee whom he believes would be most qualified to succeed him. The proposed man is then voted upon by the outgoing Board.

Officers of the new Board are elected from the Board by the outgoing members of the Board.

ST. JOHN'S STUDENT VESTRY

The St. John's Student Vestry has the help and guidance of Dr. Grant Noble. The program for next year promises to be full. In the first week of every month there will be a dinner at which a guest speaker will talk on a topic in his field; these formal discourses are followed by a more informal discussion. On the third week the Vestry holds a business meeting at Dr. Noble's house. On the second and fourth Sundays, discussion groups are held in which more personal problems, especially pertinent to college-age men, are talked over. Community projects along with dances, work weekends and discussions with Mt. Holyoke college are being considered.

Norman L. Cram ..... President

WILLIAMS COLLEGE JEWISH ASSOCIATION

The Williams College Jewish Association aims to supplement the spiritual and cultural life of all interested students. The Association conducts weekly Sabbath Services, brings in distinguished outside speakers periodically and conducts special informal study and discussion programs with both undergraduates and faculty members participating. Similar sessions are held with neighboring colleges at various times throughout the year.

COMPETITION:
Open to all interested.

POSITIONS:
Elected annually from the membership.

THE NEWMAN CLUB

The Newman Club is the Catholic organization on campus and is one of many such clubs on campuses all over the nation. The purpose of the club is to provide a program to help Catholic students maintain and strengthen their Faith while they are at Williams.

Each year the Newman Club presents monthly lectures on religious and non-religious topics and holds several Communion Breakfasts. During Lent members participate in special Lenten devotions.

Membership in the club is open to all Catholic students, although all interested students are invited to attend club functions. Meetings are announced in the Adviser and are usually held in Griffin Hall on Tuesday or Wednesday evening.

Publications

WILLIAMS RECORD

The Williams Record, semi-weekly news organ of the College, is published each Wednesday and Friday throughout the College year. Competition for Board positions is as follows:

EDITORIAL BOARD:

Three separate competitions. One open to all undergraduates for positions on the staff. One for members of the staff competing for posts as Associate Editors, and one for the Associate Editors competing for positions on the Editorial Board.

Date and Duration: All three competitions begin at the discretion of the Editorial Board members, and last for a period also determined by the Board Members. Competition open to all undergraduates begins in October.

Work Required: (a) for initial compets—writing of assigned news articles each week, special news articles, office work, and extra news work. Material due Wednesday and Sunday at noon. (b) for staff members—writing of assigned articles, head writing, office work and makeup. (c) for Associate Editors—the regular work of a staff member in addition to office management, and checking copy in the office and at the press.

Basis of Judgment: Style, facts, and news value of all material handed in, in addition to interest, aptitude, and ability to work with others.

Positions: Membership on staff, appointment to Associate Editors, and advancement to Board positions.

The Junior Members of the Board will compete for the post of Editor-in-Chief.

BUSINESS BOARD:

One competition open to all Undergraduates.

Date and Duration: Begins during October and lasts a period determined by the Board. This period usually lasts most of the first semester.

Work Required: Mechanical work of publication, securing subscriptions, local advertising solicitation, office work and bookkeeping.

Basis of Judgment: Time credit, initiative, responsibility, efficiency and general interest in the good of the publication.

Positions: Staff membership competition is open to all undergraduates. Board positions go to Sophomores and Juniors selected from the staff.

WILLIAMS NEWS BUREAU

The Williams College News Bureau is the official publicity organization of the College. Under the direction of Mr. Ralph R. Renzi, College News Director, and Mr. Frank R. Thoms, Jr., Director of Athletics, and undergraduate Charles A. Dunkel, it supplies news to local and metropolitan papers in addition to being the Williamstown correspondent for the Associated Press and UP-INS. Press coverage on all athletic events and other newsworthy activities is also supplied.

1958 - 1959

Charles A. Dunkel '59 ..... President
B. Timothy Enos '59 ..... Vice-President
Richard D. Lee '59 ..... Treasurer

FRESHMAN COMPETITION:

Date and Duration: September to May.

Work Required: Assigned news and publicity articles including feature stories, spot news and sports articles. Extra news as it occurs. Office duty once a week.

Basis of Judgment: Five men will be admitted to the staff on the basis of quality of assigned and extra news articles, publicity and news value of these articles, initiative and general interest and development of a sense of news value.

THE GULIELMENSIAN

The Gulielmensian, the College yearbook, is printed each spring. The emphasis is on the graduating class, but the book tries to give a true reflection of the entire school: faculty, classes, student activities and athletics. The next Gul will appear in May 1959.

1958 - 1959

Thomas R. White, III '60 ..... Editor
Elliott R. Morss '60 ..... Editor
David C. Bevan, Jr. '60 ..... Business Manager

BUSINESS BOARD

FRESHMAN COMPETITIONS:

Date and Duration: October to May.

At the end of this period Business Board appointments are made for the following year.

SOPHOMORE COMPETITIONS:

Members of the Business Board compete from October to May for any of the three managerial posts (Business Manager, Advertising Manager and Circulation Manager), holding these positions during their junior year. Those not attaining managerial posts may serve on the Board during their junior year. There are no seniors on the Business Board.

Basis of Judgment: In all cases men are judged on the basis of time spent working for the Gul, cooperation with managers and the ability to do an efficient job.

EDITORIAL BOARD

Open to Sophomores and Freshmen.

Date and Duration: September to March.

Work Required: Writing articles, typing, layout and arranging for Senior pictures.

Positions: Membership on Board.

COMPETITION FOR SOPHOMORE BOARD MEMBERS

Date and Duration: From September to March of sophomore year.

Work Required: Same as above.

Positions: Editor-in-Chief, Editorial Board, and Photographic Editor (at discretion of Board).

EPH WILLIAMS HANDBOOK

The Eph Williams Handbook contains pictures of all the incoming freshmen, general information about the college and a guide to all undergraduate activities, with the intention of helping the freshmen to become better acquainted with one another and the rest of the college.

Musical Organizations

GLEE CLUB

The Williams College Glee Club consists of approximately fifty-five men chosen by audition. Two rehearsals of three-quarters of an hour to one and a half hours in length are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday evenings every week. The organization gives numerous concerts each year, some on campus as a group as well as with girls' colleges such as Radcliffe, Vassar, Smith, and Colby Junior.

1958 - 1959

Donald W. Brown '59 ..... President
Bradford Smith, III '59 ..... Manager

Membership: Open to qualified men of all classes. Tryouts held each term.

Competition: The President is a senior elected by the general membership. The Librarian is a junior appointed by the Board, and the Manager is a senior selected from two junior associate managers on the basis of initiative, judgment and general ability. The associate managers are juniors chosen from a small group of assistant managers on the same basis. The assistant managers are sophomores selected from the membership of the Glee Club primarily on the basis of their desire to perform managerial duties.

Duties: Participation in concerts, arrangement of concerts, work on music, and general managerial work.

THE PURPLE KNIGHTS

The Purple Knights is the official College dance orchestra. Besides playing for campus dances, the Knights travel to other colleges and schools throughout New England and New York. Membership of the band is determined at the beginning of the fall term. Any men wishing to try out should do so early in the year.

1958 - 1959

Thomas G. Hertel '59 ..... Leader

Membership: Tryouts for all Classes.
Manager and leader are elected from among the members.

COLLEGE BAND

The Williams College Band performs during the football season, at Parents' Day and at Commencement. Outstanding performers from this group are often invited to join the Berkshire Community Orchestra.

Membership: Open to all classes.

Date and Duration: Primarily football season, but at certain other special occasions during the school year.

MANAGERIAL COMPETITION

Membership: Open to Sophomores only.

Date and Duration: Freshman week through the end of the football season.

Work Required: Assist in transportation of instruments, filing, copying, or distributing music; care of instruments and uniforms.

Basis of Judgment: Efficiency in fulfilling assignments, initiative, interest.

Positions: Assistant Manager to become Manager.

THE THOMPSON CONCERTS

For many years a course of concerts and entertainments was sustained by the late Frederick Ferris Thompson of the class of 1856. Now the course has been continued with the Thompson Committee giving three concerts a year supported by the income of the Mary Clark Thompson Fund. The committee also works in conjunction with the Music Department in sponsoring numerous musical events during the year.

1958 - 1959

David W. Boothby '59 ..... President
James H. Wallace, Jr. '59 ..... Vice-President
Paul H. Netherwood '59 ..... Treasurer

Membership: Open to all interested students. Membership affords the opportunity to become acquainted with some of the more prominent men in the music world today.

CAP AND BELLS

Five major productions, two readings and several experimental plays are presented each year in the modern, completely equipped Adams Memorial Theatre. Cap and Bells, Inc. is the student organization responsible for all presentations in the threatre. Through this organization, students are given an opportunity to learn every phase of work in the theatre.

1958 - 1959

Peter N. Culman '59 ..... President

Membership: Open to all Classes.

Any student of Williams College who earns at least fifteen points through participation in at least two of the six categories of theatrical activity in any production sponsored by any dramatic organization of the College shall be a member of Cap and Bells.

COUNCIL

Date and Duration: Unlimited.

ELIGIBILITY

(1) Membership in Cap and Bells.

(2) Member of the junior or senior class of Williams College.

(3) Writing or acting in at least one production or serving as a crewhead for at least one production.

(4) A point-score earned in the competition.

Basis of Judgment: Each council shall be chosen by its predecessors on basis of fulfillment of the four requirements listed above.

Position: The Council shall represent the six main categories of dramatics:

1. Writing and Acting.
2. Staging (Directing and Stage Managing).
3. Lights and Sound.
4. Make-up and Costumes.
5. Scenery (Construction, Design, and Properties).
6. Business (Publicity, Tickets and House, and Programs).

Category 1 shall be represented on the Council by two (2) members and each of the other five categories shall be represented by one (1) member.

Stage Manager, Business Manager, and Technical Director for each production shall be appointed by the Council.

Miscellaneous

RADIO STATION WMS

Radio Station WMS began a new era in the 1956-57 year when it commenced operation for the first time on the FM band. The station will now be heard within 10 miles of Baxter Hall by the new FM facilities as well as in all the college dorms through the old carrier current AM system. The scope of the station's operations will naturally increase tremendously because of the expansion. With more members than any other activity, WMS is the most active organization on campus.

1958 - 1959

David. D. Stoner '59 ..... President
Frederick Winston '59 ..... Secretary-Treasurer
Thomas G. Hertel '59 ..... Executive Program Director
David G. Kanter '60 ..... Executive Technical Director

Membership: Open to all Classes.

Competition to become a station member begins formally early in the fall and in the second semester. Compets are instructed personally in the various station departments: announcing, production, controlling, engineering, business, and publicity. Qualified compets become station members at the end of each semester, but can go "on the air" almost immediately as compets. No previous experience is required.

WILLIAMS AMATEUR RADIO STATION

The Williams Amateur Association, owning the station WIQDE is open to all students. The station is equipped with a transmitter operating on all bands with the maximum legal input of one kilowatt. All equipment is built by members. The club also possesses an automatic code machine. The club is actively sponsored by the physics department and supported by nominal dues from the members.

WILLIAMS OUTING CLUB (W.O.C.)

The W. O. C. proposes to stimulate interest in the natural surroundings of Williamstown during all seasons of the year. It maintains cabins and trails on Greylock and Berlin Mountains and at Mad River Glen (near ski area) with overnight camping facilities. Members have outings with other colleges throughout the year, which have been facilitated by the recent purchase of a new truck.

The W. O. C. sponsors a local scout troop through its recent consolidation with the Scout Fraternity.

1958 - 1959

George B. Secor, Jr. '59 ..... President
Austin P. Platt '59 ..... Vice-President
John E. Palmer, Jr. '59 ..... Vice-President
Cornelius H. Smith, Jr. '59 ..... Vice-President
John Walter S. Foster '59 ..... Secretary-Treasurer

Membership: Open to all Classes.

Any student wishing to join the W. O. C. should contact his "entry representative." After joining the club as an associate member, he must put in 18 hours of work on any W. O. C. activity to qualify for full membership.

Elected officers are President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer.

These officers together with division heads form the executive council.

The main divisions are: Trails, Cabins, Trips, Programs, Winter Sports, Truck, Scouting, Winter Carnival and Publicity.

During the year those members who show particular interest and responsibility are chosen by these division chairmen to participate in their committees.

WILLIAMS TRAVEL BUREAU

The Williams Travel Bureau is a student organization aiding undergraduates and faculty in solving their transportation problems. In addition to annual tours to Aspen and Bermuda the Bureau handles a tour to Europe, freshman bus charters, and all rail and air travel arrangements.

1958 - 1959

John Mangel, II '59 ..... President
Alastair A. Murray '59 ..... Business Manager

Date and Duration: September to February; February to June.

Work Required: Office duty and publicity, sales and organizational work in all the Bureau's activities.

Basis of Judgment: For membership the compet must have participated in and have knowledge of the Bureau's affairs. Ability and interest are considered by the officers at the end of the term of competition. Those who appear most promising are assigned to work with one of the Bureau's officers in order to gain more intimate knowledge of his responsibilities and work.

Positions: President, Business Manager, Vice-President in charge of rail transportation, Vice-President in charge of air transportation, and Tour Manager. All members of the Bureau are eligible for election to office. The officers and the most able members share in the annual division of profits.

WILLIAMS SPORTS CAR CLUB

This is the fifth year on the campus for the Sports Car Club. For next year movies once a month, lectures by well-known drivers, "ralleyes", and outings with groups from other Eastern colleges are planned, including a special local event scheduled for October. This organization is open to all who are interested. The owning of a car is not a necessary prerequisite for membership.

WILLIAMS CAMERA CLUB

The Williams Camera Club is a hobby club for all those interested in any phase of photography. The Club has its own dark room in Baxter Hall and has for the use of members excellant developing, printing, and enlarging equipment. In the next year the Club plans to have printing contests as well as several lectures on photography in general.

Competition: Membership is open to all interested persons. There are annual dues and monthly dark room fees.

Positions: All officers are elected.

THE WILLIAMS FLYING CLUB

The Williams Flying Club and Association, as a charter member of the Intercollegiate Flying Association, is one of the oldest flying clubs in America. Having taken part in the first Intercollegiate meet in 1920 with a Curtiss Jenny biplane, the Club now owns a Cessna 140 which is hangared at Harriman Airport in North Adams. In addition to competition in numerous meets throughout the year, the incorporated Club sponsors the popular Williams Air Show.

1958 - 1959

John M. Greer '59 ..... President

Competition: Membership open to all interested persons, upon purchase of a share in the corporation. Membership is limited to twenty-five.

Positions: All officers are elected.

THE SPANISH CLUB

The Spanish Club was organized in the spring of 1954 for the purpose of enabling interested students to practice spoken Spanish and gather further knowledge of aspects of Spanish and South American life not emphasized in the classroom. Its activities center around discussions, recorded music, films, guest speakers and publications in Spanish. Tentative arrangements have been made to visit with Spanish-speaking girls at Skidmore, Smith and other colleges.

Membership: Open to those of all classes (no competition).

Date and Duration: September to May.

Positions: The officers of the Spanish Club are: President, Secretary-Treasurer, and Publicity Officer.

THE WILLIAMS YACHT CLUB

Members of the Yacht Club represent Williams in the numerous intercollegiate sailing races which are held throughout the fall and spring. The Club sails its own Penguins on Lake Pontoosuc near Pittsfield.

ADELPHIC UNION

Freshmen who have not debated before are welcome as members of the Adelphic Union. Our purpose is to foster discussion by panels, tournaments with other schools, and debates on campus topics. Last year Williams won tournaments at McGill and Harvard, as well as the Little Three. Freshmen may take part in all these tournaments as novice debaters. In addition, there are freshman debates at prep schools, as well as a New England Prep School Debate Tournament, sponsored each year at Williams College and managed mainly by freshmen. This winter arrangements have been made for a debate with Oxford at Williamstown.

You are invited to the Adelphic Union Smoker to be held in the Union Rathskeller the second week of college, with a program "So You've Been To Europe," and an explanation of what we have to interest freshmen who want to talk.

1958 - 1959

Timothy B. Coburn '60 ..... President

Harvey D. Carter, Jr., '60 ..... Vice-President

George B. Green '61 ..... Debating Manager

Christopher H. Smith '60 ..... Treasurer

WILLIAMS LECTURE COMMITTEE

In the Spring of 1949 the Williams Lecture Committee was organized for the purpose of coordinating all speakers and lectures selected by the different organizations to appear on the campus. Throughout the year the committee, composed of a board of undergraduates and five faculty members, arranges a program which includes speakers from all walks of life, lecturing on subjects that are both timely and of interest to the student body.

1958 - 1959

William H. Edgar '59 ..... President

Competition: Open to all interested sophomores.

Date and Duration: From the second week of the sophomore year to the end of that semester. Four men are then selected from the competes to serve on the Committee.

Work Required: Publicity distribution of posters, office work, research on prospective speakers, running lectures and letter writing.

Basis of Judgment: Interest and active participation shown in the affairs of the Lecture Committee and other activities on the campus. The latter condition is due to the fact that the committee has partial control on several extracurricular activities.

Positions: Besides the four positions open to sophomores, officers are elected from the membership.

WASHINGTON GLADDEN SOCIETY

The Washington Gladden Society is an organization of those interested in the Christian Ministry and related vocations. This year there will be meetings every third Sunday afternoon, at which general religious discussions and lectures by prominent speakers will be held. The society tries to help the students decide for themselves what phase of religious work they desire to enter.

1958 - 1959

Donald P. Hart '59 ..... President

Dennis S. Mitchell '60 ..... Secretary

Competition: Membership is based completely upon interest.
Positions: All officers are elected from the membership.

CAREER WEEKEND

Career Weekend, inaugurated in January, 1955, has become an annual event on the college calendar, scheduled this year for Friday, January 30 and all day Saturday, January 31. Panel discussions, topics of which are selected by an undergraduate poll, are conducted by prominent alumni. There are also panel sessions devoted to various professions requiring graduate school work. This year's committee consists of:

William Tuach '59, Chairman
Johnston Boyden '59
William Collins '59
James Rayhill '59
Robert Julius '60
Briscoe Smith '60
George Reath, Jr., '61
Eric Widmer '61

Department Of Athletics

ORGANIZATION AND SUPPORT

Intercollegiate athletics are under the direct control of the College administration through the Director of Athletics, Frank R. Thoms, Jr., with the Athletic Council acting in an advisory and consultative capacity. The Council consists of three undergraduates, three alumni, and three members of the faculty.

For the past thirty years intercollegiate athletics have been partially supported by an assessment levied on the undergraduates. This is included on the bill presented to each student at the opening of college.

No admission is charged to undergraduates for athletic contests in Williamstown.

ATHLETIC COACHES

ALTOTT, JOSEPH R. - Head Trainer. Altott received his B. S. in 1953 and his M. Ed. in 1954, both from Springfield College. He had two years' experience in physical and corrective therapy at Fort Campbell, Ky., U. S. Army Hospital, and served two years as assistant trainer and assistant in the injury care program at Springfield. He came to Williams in 1954.

BAXTER, RICHARD - Varsity and Freshman Golf: Professional at Taconic Golf Club for 35 years. His teams have won the New England championship for the last three years and were Little Three champions for 1958.

BULLOCK, J. EDWIN - Varsity and Freshman Wrestling: Director of Intramural Athletics: A graduate of Springfield College, "Uncle Ed" was called to Williams in 1924. Promoted to an assistant professor in 1928 and an associate professor of Physical Education in 1949, he is Chairman of the Department of Physical Education.

CHAFFEE, CLARENCE C. - Varsity Soccer, Varsity and Freshman Tennis, Varsity and Freshman Squash: "Chafe", former Director of Athletics at Riverdale School and a graduate of Brown University, has been a consistent producer of Little Three Champions in squash and tennis since he came to Williams in 1937. The Ephs took the New England tennis crown under his tutelage three years ago.

COOMBS, RAYMOND F. - Varsity Baseball, Freshman Football and Basketball: A star athlete at Duke University, Bobby Coombs later pitched for the New York Giants. Coombs has three Little Three baseball crowns to his credit since coming to Williams in March 1946.

DELISSER, PETE - Assistant Varsity Football, Varsity and Freshman Wrestling, Assistant Varsity Baseball: A graduate of Williams in 1951, DeLisser starred in football, wrestling, and baseball as an undergraduate. After coaching and teaching at Hotchkiss and the University School in Cleveland, he returned to his Alma Mater last fall as freshman football coach and assistant in wrestling and baseball. This fall he goes up to the varsity to replace Jim Ostendarp who leaves Williams to go to Cornell.

FLYNT, HENRY N., JR. - Freshman Soccer: A graduate of Williams in the class of 1944, Hank has been coaching freshman soccer teams since 1951. He serves the college as Director of Student Aid and adviser on Williams College Prizes and Scholarship and the Armed Services.

MC HENRY, WILLIAM D. - Head Freshman Football, Varsity Lacrosse: A newcomer this year to the Williams coaching staff, McHenry is a 1954 graduate of Washington & Lee where he starred in football and lacrosse. Before coming to Williams he coached the line in football at Pennsylvania Military College.

MUIR, ROBERT B. - Varsity and Freshman Swimming, Assistant Varsity Soccer: Bob Muir has brought Williams to the top in small college swimming. Since 1944 his teams have won 9 New England titles and tied for another with Brown last winter. They have also won the last 13 Little Three championships in a row. Developer of outstanding individual performers, Muir was honored by being appointed head coach of the U. S. men's Olympics in Melbourne, Australia.

NAVARRO, FRANK F. - Assistant Varsity Football, Wrestling and Freshman Baseball: Navarro came to Williams in 1956 as freshman football coach and went up to the varsity last fall. He graduated from Maryland in 1953 where he was a star guard. While in the service he coached the line at Westover Air Force Base and in 1955 he served under Lou Little at Columbia.

PLANSKY, ANTHONY B. - Varsity and Freshman Track, Varsity and Freshman Cross Country: A former Decathlon champion, Tony enjoyed a colorful and active career in both football and baseball. He came to Williams in 1931 and took over as head track coach in 1936.

SHAW, ALEX - Varsity Basketball, Assistant Varsity Football, Freshman Lacrosse: Former professional basketball player in his eighth season as the Purple cage mentor, three years ago Al guided the squad to a season marred by only one defeat, annexing the Little Three Championship, and representing New England in the NCAA Tournament in Madison Square Garden.

TOWNSEND, RALPH J. - Varsity and Freshman Skiing, Director of WOC: Former Olympic skiing star, Townsend came to Williams in 1950. A graduate of New Hampshire, Townsend has shown excellent results against top competition and poor weather conditions.

WATTERS, LEN - Varsity Football and Freshman Baseball: Watters came to Williams in the fall of 1948 as head man of a new coaching staff. Previous coaching experience was gained at White Plains, N. Y. High School where his teams won eight championships and were noted for their fine conditioning and complete mastery of fundamentals. Len won the Little Three title last year with an undefeated team.

ELIGIBILITY FOR TEAMS

Eligibility to represent the College in any athletic organization as member, substitute or officer, is determined for the ensuing quarter at the beginning and at the middle of each semester.

A student is ineligible for participation in the above mentioned activities if:

(1) He is on probation for irregularity of conduct or attendance;

(2) He receives two E's in a five course schedule, or one E in a four course schedule. ("Incomplete" does not count as E);

(3) He is made ineligible by vote of the Committee on Academic Standing because of a dangerously low record.

No freshman may represent the College in athletics except freshman contests, and no freshman may represent the College in non-athletic activities (except freshman activities) before "warnings" in the first semester.

No student who enters by transfer from another college shall be eligible to represent the College in any intercollegiate athletic contest for a period of one academic year after his entrance.

All competitors for College organizations are subject to the same eligibility rules as officers or other members of these organizations.

The Athletic Managerial Competitions are under the supervision of the Purple Key Society and under the jurisdiction of the Athletic Council and the College Council.

ELECTIONS OF ATHLETIC MANAGERS

Any member of the sophomore class may compete for the assistant managerships of the athletic teams if he is eligible when competition begins. He must also be eligible at its conclusion in order to secure a position.

The juniors who are assistant managers of all sports have direct charge of their respective competitions, but recommendations are made only after consultation with captains, coaches, and managers.

In case a man who has been elected to a managership is unable to fill his office, the man immediately below him in order of recommendation succeeds to his position and the others move up accordingly.

BASIS OF JUDGMENT

In each athletic managerial competition the basis of judgment, established by the Purple Key Society, is as follows:

40% Assigned work and efficiency.

25% Attitude (interest, cooperation, reliability).

25% Initiative (under no circumstances will credit be given for extra work in excess of seven hours per week).

10% Ideas.

WILLIAMS COLLEGE

LIBRARY HOURS

1958 - 1959

DURING THE COLLEGE YEAR:

Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 12 m.; 1 to 6 p.m.; 7:30 to 10 p.m. (to 1 a.m. in the Lower Reading Room).

Saturday, 8 a.m. to 12 m.; 1 to 6 p.m.

Sunday, 2:30 to 6 p.m.; 7:30 to 10 p.m. (to 1 a.m. in the Lower Reading Room).

DURING VACATIONS:

Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 12 m.; 1 to 4 p.m.

Saturday and Sunday, closed. When a vacation ends on a Monday morning the Library is open the preceding Sunday evening.

Any changes from the foregoing will be posted at the Circulation Desk.

ROOM ARRANGEMENT EXPLAINED

There are certain parts of the Library building which every student will use often during his course at Williams. A few minutes spent browsing in the various rooms at first may save hours when classes are in full swing and time is limited.

Circulation Hall

First, just inside the front (west) door, one enters the Circulation Hall, which contains the Circulation Desk, where books from the stacks are borrowed and returned, and the Reserve Desk, where the books assigned for class study are kept. The cases on the opposite side of the Circulation Hall comprise the Card Catalog, which lists all the books in the Library.

Book Stacks

The doors behind the Catalog lead to the Book Stacks, where the main collection of books, bound magazines, and newspapers is stored. These are arranged according to subject, on nine tiers of shelving, and a "Directory of Classes" giving the location of subjects in the various stacks is posted conspicuously on each tier. Also every row of stacks is labeled at each end with its contents. A search for one or two favorite subjects by consulting the Directory of Classes will show how it is used. Books from the stacks must be charged at the Circulation Desk before being taken from the building.

Oversize books (more than 25cm. tall) are commonly kept on the bottom shelf, below their proper location. The metal cabinets on each tier contain the largest folios. Bound files of the New York Times and other newspapers are shelved according to date on Tiers I and II. Bound general magazines are on Tier III, as indicated on the Directory of Classes.

Bound Periodicals Catalog

Though the periodicals are represented by card entries in the main card catalog, a complete catalog showing holdings and locations in the Library is on Tier III, Carrel 4.

Carrel Tables

The tables throughout the stacks provide quiet places to study near the materials one is using. Books will be reserved for stack use if placed, with the student's name, on the desired table. Bound periodicals may be similarly reserved for a period of one week only.

Mabie Room

The Hamilton Wright Mabie Memorial Room, in the southwest corner of the building, contains the recent numbers of newspapers and magazines arranged by subject around the room. Current periodicals must be used in this room and cannot be taken from the building.

Reference Room

The remaining first-floor room for student use is the large north hall, known as the Reference Room, where the main collection of reference books is kept. The assistants will gladly show students how to use the reference collection, and will help them, when needed, in locating information not readily found.

The reference books are arranged around the walls of this room beginning on the east side. The subjects follow each other in order of the Library of Congress Classifications ending with the section of bibliographies (classified under Z) immediately to the left of the door to the balcony. The remaining shelves of the north wall hold the indexes to periodicals, newspapers, and government documents, and a collection of recent college catalogs. Large cases at each end of the room contain atlases. Books in the Reference Room are NOT to be taken from the room without special permission.

Other Reading Rooms

The Roger Preston Room at the foot of the north stairway and the Stocking Room at the back of Tier IV are also available as reading rooms. The Lower Reading Room, below the Reference Room, is set aside as a smoking room. Smoking is not permitted in the stacks of the Library.

RESERVED BOOKS

At the discretion of the faculty, certain books are taken from the book stacks and "reserved" for use in particular courses. These books are issued at the reserved book desk in the Circulation Hall for use in the Lower Reading Room, where smoking is permitted, in the Main Reading Room, and in the book stack reading areas. Reserved books are not to be taken from the Library during library hours unless they have been issued expressly for home use. Borrowers sign for the books when they are issued and must return them to the desk immediately after using them. They are not transferable. Although reserved books are intended for use in the Library, they may be signed out for restricted overnight use if returned promptly at the opening of the Library the next day. With the exception of the Lower Reading Room, the Library closes at 10 p.m. (6 p.m. on Saturday). Books may be charged for overnight use 1 hour before closing time. A "return slot" is located in the Lower Reading Room for books not issued for overnight use. "Overnight" books may be returned before the Library opens through the slot in the south wall of the Mabie Room.

PHONOGRAPH RECORDS

The Library has a collection of over seven thousand phonograph records available for circulation. While this collection is largely classical music, some popular items are included also. Most of the collection consists of standard records, but long playing records are gradually being introduced. Care must be taken to make sure that the records are used on a machine adapted for them.

Because of the heavy demand for this material loans of records are made for three days only. Students are held responsible for breakage or damage to the records while in their possession. In case of breakage to one record of an album, the student may be required to replace the complete album if single records are not procurable.

There is a special catalog of phonograph records at the end of the card catalog. It contains card entries arranged alphabetically by composers, instrumental mediums, and forms. The call number is on the upper left-hand corner of the card entry, and should be copied in full and presented at the Circulation Desk if you wish to borrow a record.

REGARDING FINES AND RULES

In spite of the almost universal policy of libraries in charging cash fines for books overdue, Williams men enjoy the unique privilege of having a college library which charges no fines. It is therefore up to the individual student to show that this unusual freedom is warranted by the prompt return of all books as soon as due. Students who do abuse the privileges of the Library will be reported for disciplinary action. The intent has been to avoid formal rules and regulations as far as possible, trusting rather to the discrimination and good taste expected of Williams men in the use of Library facilities.

In general, the only formal rule concerns types of material which cannot be allowed to circulate—namely, newspapers, magazines, government documents, Williamsiana and the contents of the Reserve Room (except overnight), and the Reference Room.

HOW TO USE MAGAZINE INDEXES

Among the most useful tools in any library are the periodical indexes, shelved in the Reference Room, through which one can locate the most recent articles on a subject, as well as what any particular magazine author has written. The ones most used are the one or two general indexes, although at times those covering special subjects, such as art, education, or public affairs, are indispensable.

The Readers' Guide

The most helpful is the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature, which indexes over one hundred of the leading general magazines. It appears twice a month (except in midsummer) with cumulative issues, which supersede the previous numbers, appearing frequently. Each year a bound volume is published to replace the individual issues for that year; and at longer intervals larger cumulations appear, covering three to five years. These bound volumes go back to 1900. Before that date Poole's Index serves as a subject index (no author entries) to magazines back to 1802.

Other Magazine Indexes

International Index to Periodicals, supplements Readers' Guide by indexing about 200 of the more scholarly and specialized journals.

Public Affairs Information Service. Indexes several hundred publications in sociology, legislation, political science, and practical economics, including books, documents, and pamphlets as well as periodicals (since 1915).

Education Index. Indexes over 150 selected magazines (since 1929).

Art Index. Indexes over 130 magazines and museum bulletins in archaeology, architecture, ceramics, decoration, painting, and sculpture (since 1929).

Biography Index. Indexes biographical materials in 1500 periodicals and also in books (since 1946).

Book Review Digest. Indexes reviews in over 50 magazines (since 1905). Indicates length and opinion of reviews. Includes excerpts.

New York Times Index. Indexes the New York Times since 1913. Excellent for locating speeches and for verifying dates.

STYLE SHEET

DIRECTIONS CONCERNING THE USE OF QUOTED PASSAGES, FOOTNOTES, AND BIBLIOGRAPHY

Special attention is called to the regulations section of this booklet entitled LITERARY DISHONESTY OR PLAGIARISM.

The following instructions have been prepared in order to introduce Williams students to the techniques for acknowledging indebtedness, and in order that all papers written by Williams undergraduates may be uniform in format.

General Instructions Concerning Format

1. All typewritten papers should be double-spaced.
2. All papers, whether typewritten or in longhand, should have a margin of at least one inch on both sides of the page.
3. Write on one side of paper only.
4. If long-hand papers are written on close-lined note-book paper, every other line should be used.
5. Pages should be numbered.

Directions Concerning Quoted Passages

1. All quoted passages should be checked with their originals to make sure of their complete accuracy.
2. Quotations may be indicated simply by quotation marks if they comprise not more than one line of poetry or not more than one short sentence of prose.
3. If the quotation is from a poem and comprises more than a single line, it must be single-spaced, have a special margin, and preserve the line-arrangement of the original. No quotation marks are necessary, since the single-spacing indicates that the passage is quoted.

Example:

Marlowe's skillful use of enjambment may be seen in the following passage from his description of Sestos:

> For every street, like to a firmament,
> Glistered with breathing stars, who, where they went,
> Frighted the melancholy earth, which deemed
> Eternal heaven to burn, for so it seemed.
> As if another Phaeton had got
> The guidance of the sun's chariot.

4. If the quotation is from a prose work and comprises more than a short sentence it must be single-spaced and the regular margin preserved. No quotation marks are necessary.

Example:

But where were the infantry of Prussia—the bluecoats who had borne up the allied right at Blenheim? To Raby at Berlin, Marlborough wrote, on May 21:

If it should please God to give us a victory over the enemy, the Allies will be little obliged to the King for the success: and if, on the other hand, we should have any disadvantage, I know not how he will be able to excuse himself.

5. A quotation should have a definite grammatical relationship to the sentence which introduces it.

Example:

Shaw's deceptive habit of treating serious ideas in comic terms was also in the mind of Thomas Dickinson when he observed:

It is true that in Arms and the Man Shaw treated this theme lightly, even frivolously, but the play showed iron underneath its playful surface.

Example:

Dickinson points out that although "Shaw treated this theme [human illusions] lightly . . . the play showed iron underneath its playful surface."

(Note that editorial comments introduced into a quotation are placed in square brackets and that omissions, of whatever length, are indicated by three dots. If the omission occurs at the end of a sentence a fourth dot, a question mark, or an exclamation point must be added as the terminal punctuation of the sentence.)

Footnotes

1. Number the footnotes consecutively throughout the paper. The index number appears at the end of the quoted or paraphrased passage.

2. Acknowledge indebtedness to a book with a footnote that gives the author's name, the title of the book underlined, and the page reference:
   (1) Harriet Monroe, Poets and their Art, p. 30.

3. A consecutive reference to the same book or magazine is indicated by
   (2) Ibid., p. 39.

4. A subsequent but not a consecutive reference to the same book is indicated by
   (4) Monroe, p. 45.

5. If the book is published in more than one volume, be sure to indicate the proper volume number in Roman numerals followed by the page number in Arabic numerals:
   (7) Ray Stannard Baker, Woodrow Wilson and World Settlement, III, 446.

6. Acknowledge indebtedness to a magazine article with a footnote that gives the author's name, the title of the article in quotation marks, the name of the magazine underlined, the volume number in Roman numerals, and the page reference in Arabic numerals:
   (3) L. S. Richard, "Democracy in Religion," Survey, XXIV, 537.

7. Acknowledge indebtedness to an unsigned magazine article with a footnote that gives title of the article in quotation marks, the name of the magazine underlined, the volume number in Roman numerals, and the page reference in Arabic numerals:
   (6) "The Motion Pictures—Theme and Characterization," The Bookman, LXIV, 130.

   Note: If the magazine is not paged continuously throughout the volume, do not use the volume number but give the full date and the page number:
   (6) "Hamlet in Modern Speech," The Literary Digest, December 5, 1935, p. 26.

8. Acknowledge indebtedness to a newspaper article with a footnote that gives the author's name (if known), the title of the article (if it has a title) in quotation marks, the name of the newspaper underlined, the date (month, day and year) of the issue, the page reference in Arabic numerals, and the column number immediately preceded by a colon. If the newspaper is divided into separately paged sections, insert numbers immediately after the date.

Examples:

Reference to ordinary unsigned news articles:

(5) New York Times, Aug. 14, 1945, 13:6.

Reference to signed articles with no title:

(8) Francis Hackett, New York Times, Aug. 8, 1945, 19:3.

Reference to signed articles with title:

(11) Stuart Cloete, "Contrasting Appraisals of a Still Dark Continent," New York Times, Aug. 22, 1945, Sec. VI, 5:3.

9. Acknowledge indebtedness to government documents with a footnote giving sufficient information so that a reader could check the source quickly. This ordinarily should include the name of the agency, the title of the document, the volume or issue number if it is part of a series, the date and page. Some government documents are signed by their authors, but the author's name is usually not included in a footnote.

Examples:

(a) Congressional Record, 79th Cong., 2nd Sess., July 25, 1946, p. 10138.

(b) Legislative bills:
H. R. 5852, 80th Cong., 2nd Sess. (1948)
H. J. Res. 23, 79th Cong., 2nd Sess. (1946)
S. 1776, 77th Cong., 1st Sess. (1941)

(c) Committee hearings:
U. S. Senate, Committee on Military Affairs, Hearings on Demobilization of the Armed Forces, 79th Cong., 1st Sess. (1945), p. 768.

(d) Statutes:
44 U. S. Stat. at L (1917), 1234-35.

(e) Supreme Court decisions:
Jones v. Securities and Exchange Commission, 298 U. S. I (1936).

(f) Departmental publications:
U. S. Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, Elections Calendar for 1844, p. 3.

For types of documents not illustrated in these examples, see Peyton Hurt, Bibliography and Footnotes, in the reference room of the library.

Bibliography

1. List all materials alphabetically by author, or, if anonymous, by title. Append the bibliography to the end of the paper.

   Note: Bibliographies of long papers on specialized subjects are often more useful if they are divided into a number of sections according to the kinds of publications used. For example: Books, Magazines, Newspapers, Government Documents, etc.

2. Each bibliographical entry for a book should include the name of the author (last name first), the title of the book underlined, and the place and date of publication. Lowell, Amy, Tendencies in Modern Poetry, New York, 1917.

3. If the book is published in more than one volume, be sure to indicate the total number of volumes:
Baker, Ray Stannard, Woodrow Wilson and World Settlement, 3 vols., New York, 1922.

4. A bibliographical entry for a magazine article may be in the same form as the footnote for the same article, except that the author's last name comes first and the entry should indicate the date of the volume and the full pagination of the article:
Richard, L. S., "Democracy in Religion," Survey, XXIV (1910), 535-542.

5. A bibliographical entry for an unsigned magazine article may be in the same form as the footnote for the article except that full pagination should be given, and if the magazine has continuous pagination the date of the volume should follow the volume number:
"Hamlet in Modern Speech," The Literary Digest, December 5, 1925, pp. 26-28.
"The Motion Pictures—Theme and Characterization," The Bookman, LXIV (1926-1927), 130-131.

6. A bibliographical entry for a newspaper article may be in the same form as the footnote for the same article, except that the author's last name comes first and the entry should indicate the full pagination (or number of columns) of the article.

Examples:

Entry for ordinary unsigned news article:

New York Times, Aug. 14, 1945, 13:6.

Entry for signed article with no title:

Hackett, Francis, New York Times, Aug. 9, 1945, 19:3-4.

Entry for signed article with title:

Cloete, Stuart, "Contrasting Appraisals of a Still Dark Continent," New York Times, Aug. 12, 1945. Sec. VI, 5 and 29.

If there are more than 6 bibliographical entries for newspaper articles the title of the newspaper and the period are sufficient.

Example:

New York Times, April July, 1944.

7. A bibliographical entry for a government document may be in the same form as the footnote, with the following exceptions:
   (a) Where there are more than 6 entries for the Congressional Record, one entry may be substituted for the group provided that this entry indicates the dates or period covered.

Example: Congressional Record, 79th Cong., 2nd Sess., May 15-August 1, 1946.

   (b) Where the publishing office is an agency other than the Government Printing office, this fact should be noted.

Example: Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, Elections Calendar for 1944 (Washington: Bureau of the Census, 1945).

"THE SPIRIT OF '61"

Freshman Year In Review

As the school year opened in September, 1957, the incoming class of 1961 was heralded as a class of very high potential, and school officials looked expectantly toward it for great accomplishments.

The Freshman Council, which was elected at the beginning of the year, saw as its first objective the molding of the 280 new Freshmen into a feeling of "togetherness" and sought to build up the spirit of the class. The Freshmen won complete victories over our Sophomore brethren in all phases of competition—in the quad melees, in the chug, bike racing, and push ball contests during Soph-Frosh "smokers" and the Soph-Frosh Field Day. In the traditional Little Three goal post efforts, the Class of '61 was equally successful—both offensively and defensively. The young Ephmen completely overwhelmed the Wesleyan goal posts at Wesleyan in record time and followed this performance a few weeks later with a sterling defense of the Weston Field goal posts against the impotent Amherst frosh. The class then uprooted the posts, and, after a victorious march up Spring Street, later presented inscribed sections of the posts to the senior members of the undefeated varsity football team at a dinner in their honor which was held at Baxter Hall.

In athletic competition the class of '61 continued the fine record of recent classes by annexing several Little Three championships and compiling outstanding records in all sporting endeavors.

The Freshmen directed and built the first all-college snow sculpture. The grandiose figure of old King Winter, made entirely of solidly-packed snow, originally stood thirty-five feet high and withstood the beating sun for so long that there was speculation in many circles that King Winter would witness June graduation.

The highly-successful Spring Houseparty was run for the first time by a Freshman Class. Despite rain which washed out the Saturday Carnival and the Freshman Terrace Dance and outdoor meals, it was judged by many people to be one of the best houseparties in recent years.

In the beginning of the school year a siege of flu gripped the college community and the Freshmen got off to a slow start academically, and not until the middle of the school year did the class begin to accelerate toward realizing the academic goals which are most important to the college student; the Class of '61 is now on its way toward becoming another of Williams' outstanding classes in scholastic endeavor.

During much of the second semester, the class and the Freshman Council devoted itself toward realization of the goal of Total Opportunity. An overwhelmingly-large majority of the class indicated by signature their hope that every fellow entering rushing be judged on his individual merits and that each person entering rushing receive at least one bid to join a house. In this way every freshman is given the opportunity of participating in the Williams social system. Total Opportunity was realized for the first time last year through the efforts of the Class of 1960, and the Class of 1961 sincerely hopes that the precedent will be continued through the years.

You, the Class of 1962, will see that the Williams heritage is a wonderful one, and I take this opportunity to extend to you, on behalf of the Class of 1961, a hearty welcome; we are sure you will continue to carry the name of Williams "upward and onward".

Robert Montgomery

President of the Class of '61

Dear Bill,

It is good to know that you are coming to Williams in September. It was good to hear from you, and I will try to answer your questions.

About laundry and linen, there is no problem. "George" Rudnick has been doing the job around here for years. His work on shirts is acknowledged to be the best, and the cost is the lowest in town. Bring your own sheets etc. and have him launder them. Using your own linen is not only the cheapest method but the most convenient, since you can put it right in your laundry bundle. As for service, Rudnick's can't be beat. Economy and convenience make Rudnick's your best bet in Williamstown.

As for the football season, the prospects are bright . . .

This Is a Letter a Williams Man, Class of '59

Might write to a Member of the Class of '62
